ONE KILLED TWO OTHERS ARE INJURED

French Government Determined to Operate Railroads in Area

GERMANS ARE ADAMANT
Refuse to Yield in Their Policy of Passive Resistance to Invaders

Dueseldorf, Feb. 23.—Blood has again been shed in the Ruhr in the course of the French "digging in" process. One German civilian was killed and two others seriously wounded at Bochum yesterday when French soldiers fired on a crowd which had gathered to watch occupation of the law courts building.

Observers said the shooting was done by police, who were obviously irritated by the jeers of the bystanders.

The decision of Premier Poincare and Thoms to operate the railroad through an allied civil administration is seen here as a move here to improve transportation conditions, although General Peccotte asserts that the railroad already operating under French and Belgian supervision are doing their work.

The functioning of the allied customs ring is threatened with difficulty in consequence of Berlin's orders that no taxes be paid to the occupiers. Such payments, the federal minister of finance has declared, will not be recognized by the German government. German government customs officials have been reminded of their responsibility to the Reich and the government confidence that they will resist seizure of their offices with as much firmness as has been shown by industrial workers.

Meanwhile the French maintain that their customs barrier is secured and that the court of Germany life blood has been diverted.

Germans on their part declared to the French that they are adamant in their determination not to yield and point out that such penalties as expulsion of German actionaries only strengthens the German position.

Expulsion of German and Rhineland officials already totals 476, the Germans declare.

HORSE GUIDES RIDER TO OLD HOME IN BLIZZARD
Selfridge, N. D., Feb. 23.—Walter Smith, farmer, owes his life today to the accuracy of sense of direction possessed by his horse. Riding home from Selfridge, he was caught by the recent snowstorm, and unable to see more than a few feet ahead, lost his way. He dismounted and tried leading his horse. Failing to reach any house, he followed his horse, which took him to a farmhouse on the farm of J. J. Olson, former owner of the animal.

Guided by a light, Smith reached the house, and was given care. His hands and face were badly frozen but he is recovering.

POKER HOLDUP CASE IN COURT

Defendants Are Bound Over in Stutsman County

Jamestown, N. D., Feb. 23.—William Bohlig, Kelley Whittaker, and James Jennings, young men held here since Feb. 1, waiting for trial on the charge of being implicated in the holdup of a poker game and the shooting of one of the participants in the game, George Blake, were arraigned here Wednesday on the charge of first degree robbery. All waived examination and bail was fixed at $5,000, each to await trial in the district court.

Bohlig was the only one of the three who had an attorney. His attorney, John Knauf, asked that bail be reduced in his case but without avail.

Bohlig's parents, well-to-do farm people of the Cleveland district, signed his bond and he was released.

The others were unable to obtain bail.

Bohlig has a wife and year-old child here in Jamestown while Whittaker's maternal status is not yet clear, though he claims to have a family. Jennings, the youngest, is a minor.

Blake, though out of the hospital and able to go about the city somewhat, did not attend the hearing, as did the other holdup victims.

PRETTY FACE AND SMILE— BANK OF ENGLAND YOURS!

Says Arrested "Sheik Girl"

WILMA McMULLIN

By Roy Gibbons
NEA Staff Correspondent
Chicago, Feb. 23.—A pretty face, an attractive smile and a quarter's worth of paint from the corner drugstore and a girl "can get away with the Bank of England."

So says Wilma McMullin, in jail here on charges of being the lure and "come on" for a dapper sheik band which preyed upon wealthy old men.

And the reason why this recipe brings wealth is simply stated by Wilma, as follows:

"Because all men are fools."

Pronounced of the flapper type, Wilma declares that, as far back as she can remember in her 19 years, she has got what she wanted just by smiling.

"That's all the pay a girl has to give—just a grin or two," she says.

Split Profits? No!
Chance taught her the monetary value of a smile. A dental cream manufacturer told her her smile as an ad for tooth paste should be worth much money.

If worth money to him, why not to her, without splitting the profits?

This thought got her into the game, from which she draws these conclusions:

"It's the old ones that flop hardest—you know the kind I mean, with more dough than they know what to do with. Single or married, it's all the same."

"The poor guys with a bunch of kids are different, though. They're so busy paying bills, they keep away from smiles. They know smiles cost money, and they're afraid of them."

Easy Prey
"But the other fellows, the ones with their minds full of money and business, they grab it when it bumps into 'em."

"You drop some papers or a handkerchief in front of one of 'em, he returns it and first thing you know he's asking to take you out to lunch."

"But this bunch of fellows police say were my assistants, say they lacked finish. That's why we're here. They had to pull the rough stuff on this guy that squealed, or I could have got his dough without a yelp. Women don't need strong-arm methods and can get better results without. Just a smile or two is enough."

Following the tribute paid to President Merrifield, announcement was made by the toastmaster that Mrs. Merrifield had established a Ten Thousand Dollar Student Loan Fund at the University as a memorial to the late Dr. Merrifield.

The next decade of the University's life was represented by M. Scott Cameron, who pictured the life of the University in his decade, and called attention to the list of those from that decade which had won distinction.

The last decade was represented by Miss Dorothy Blanding of last year's graduating class. As a fitting conclusion to the program of memories, Miss Blanding pointed out the rapid development of the University in the past few years, showed that it had more than doubled its enrollment in the past five years, and gave a picture of the great University of today as compared with that of the previous decades.

Telegraphic greetings from the 250 Alumni who met in Grand Forks yesterday in commemoration of the event were read by the Toastmaster.

A letter of greetings from President Kane of the University, in which he commended the University to the unceasing loyalty of the Alumni was read by Justice H. A. Bronson.

R. E. Wenzel, President of the Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota, presented an inspirational talk on the value and necessity of the Alumni organization.

R. J. Murphy then took charge of the meeting, and the preliminary steps were taken toward the organization of a Bismarck-Mandan U. N. D. Club. Resolutions were passed and telegrams of greeting and appreciation were sent to Mrs. Webster Merrifield, and to the President and Faculty of the University.

The evening was concluded by the signing of Alma Mater.

Plans for the banquet had been worked out by Ernest Budge and Harold Shafe, who were congratulated for the success of the affair.

Plans for Organizing Bismarck-Mandan U. N. D. Club Are Outlined

Seventy former students and alumni of the University of North Dakota met in an enthusiastic banquet and program at the Grand Pacific last evening to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the University. Table decorations, in charge of Miss Hazel Nielson, were pink and white, the university colors, with a rose at each place. Singing, in charge of Miss Ruth Rowley, and college yells, led by M. At the commencement of the program, announcement was made of the victory of the University basketball team over the Agricultural College by a score of 23-21 yesterday afternoon, which was the occasion for a real old-time demonstration.

Professor E. F. Chandler, for 25 years head of the Department of Civil Engineering, acted as toastmaster, and his memories of some of the incidents in the school life of most of those on the program gave added enjoyment to the program of toasts.

The first toast was by Governor R. A. ADMINISTRATION BILLS TO BE PUSHED AHEAD IN LEGISLATURE TO AVOID RUSH OF LAST DAYS

WARRANT OUT FOR
CHIEF OF POLICE

Minneapolis, Feb. 23.—A warrant for the arrest of A. O. Jensen, superintendent of police, based on four indictments recently returned by the Grand Jury was issued today and placed in the hands of Sheriff Earle Brown for service.

Chief Jensen, who is charged with willful neglect of duty in failing to close up gambling and disorderly houses has been relieved of duty at his own request pending disposition of the charges.

A. C. Jensen, superintendent of police, who was arrested today for neglect of duty in failing to close up gambling and disorderly houses has been relieved of duty at his own request pending disposition of the charges.

The house of representatives sent many important measures to third reading late yesterday while acting on committee reports or sitting in committee. The committee on the possible final disposition of the measures before the final legislative rush begins. Speaker Roy Johnson announced to the house that there were 205 senate bills to be disposed of in the next seven working days.

The administration bill for liquidation of the Home Building Association was sent to the calendar on committee report with a few scattering "noes" on a viva voce vote, senate bill No. 356 providing for a constitutional amendment re-enacting the $10,000,000 limit on bond issues for state industries and providing no bonds shall be issued unless an annual tax is levied to pay the interest also went on the calendar in the same manner, the majority report of the committee on tax and tax laws favoring senate bill No. 21, the income tax bill, with minor amendments was accepted and the majority report favoring the 7 o'clock polls closing law was accepted but the bill later withdrawn by the committee for minor amendments.

The house, however, refused to put senate bill No. 375, validating the fifty percent settlement of bank taxes for the years 1919, 1920 and 1921 and authorizing county commissioners to compromise unpaid taxes "upon the same basis of settlement upon which nearly all the banks of the state have paid taxes for such years" on the calendar and instead put it in general orders for discussion.

No bills were passed because yesterday was a holiday, but the house put in a busy five hours disposing of other business, and today will put in a full day.

Married Women Bill Dies
The house ended excitement among the stenographers at the capital when it indefinitely postponed senate bill No. 390, which would prohibit employment of married women in public offices in the state if they were supported by "able-bodied husbands able to earn a living wage." There was no record vote, but there were many "noes" when the vote was put. A minority committee report, in fact, suggested an also prohibiting married women from being members of the legislature. Mrs. Marie Craig, the only married woman of the house, responded by the jest by suggesting the bill go into general orders so that she, also, could suggest some amendments.

The house killed the Ettestad senate bill No. 229, restoring the lower rate obtaining prior to 1917 for printing delinquent tax notices in official newspapers, by a vote of 52 to 39, without debate.

The minority of the banking committee sought to amend the bill validating the 50 percent settlement on bank stock taxes for the last three years when, through omission, the legislature failed to tax the banks. They desired to strike out the words "compromised" respecting

KILL BISMARCK BILL
Senate State Affairs Committee Recommends Light Bill to be Killed

The house judiciary committee was to report in for indefinite postponement this afternoon the senate bill providing a gross earnings tax on telephone companies instead of the present property tax. Chairman Stark and the committee sentiment was that the gross earnings tax, because of low telephone earnings of the last few years, would produce less than the $175,000 or $180,000 now paid by taxes by telephone companies, although it was realized in a few years the gross earnings tax might produce more than the present property tax.

The proposed constitutional amendment permitting issuance of bonds to build dormitories at state educational institutions, the majority being to kill the resolution.

The committee agreed to recommend for passage the bill providing five-sixths of a jury may return a verdict in civil cases after being out 12 hours.

The state affairs committee voted to recommend for passage the senate bill restoring the inspection of weights and measures to sheriffs.

Bank Committee Action
The banking committee voted favorably on the bond bill providing a constitutional amendment for a bond issue to pay depositors of closed banks, senate bill No. 356 giving the state examiner power to order an assessment of a weak bank under the stockholders' double liability act; and S. B. 267 to aid the guaranty fund commission in clearing up affairs of insolvent banks, giving the supreme court original jurisdiction in liquidation proceedings.

Members of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau appeared before the senate committee to protest the senate resolution calling on the bureau to cut its rates in half. The committee deferred action.

Increase Borrowing Power
Two bills for financing the state mill land elevator at Grand Forks were voted for recommendation for passage by the senate committee on state affairs today.

The bills are amended by the committee, however, who to raise the limit of the bond issue for which they provide from one million to two million dollars, and also to permit the mill and elevator to borrow through regular commercial channels over and over the bond issue.

Rep. Jackson's bill to repeal the measure passed at the last session of the legislature for a state-owned electric plant at Bismarck will be recommended for indefinite postponement.

N. D. EDUCATOR RECOGNIZED
Velva, N. D., Feb. 23.—J. H. Bradley, until recently superintendent of schools at Velva, and active in North Dakota educational circles, has been elected superintendent of the public schools at Lindsay, Cal., at a salary of $4,000 annually, according to word received here. Mr. Bradley removed to California last summer where he took work toward his degree of doctor of philosophy at Berkeley. He received the M. A. degree from the University of North Dakota in 1918. Before coming to Velva, he served as superintendent at Berthold, Dickinson and Steele.

SAILOR WHO HIT KING GEORGE DEAD

Portland, Feb. 23.—Steven Deverill, 87, who was dead today at his home at Landham, a suburb, used to tell of how he once knocked down King George of England. Deverill was then a seaman in the British navy and the King was a strapping prince. According to the aged man's account of the incident he hit the youthful son of royalty when the latter made a slighting remark about something close to Deverill's heart during a cruise in which the Prince was participating. "And he was a better man for it," the sailor concluded.

EXECUTIVE SESSION
Democrats and Republicans Join in War on Bill that Blocks Senate Business

Washington, Feb. 23.—An end of the senate shipping bill fight appeared near at hand today through an agreement made behind closed doors for a temporary truce in a filibuster which has blocked all business since Monday.

In executive session the senate agreed to adjourn tonight at 6 o'clock, take up minor bills for two hours tomorrow and then proceed with the shipping bill, but with the possibility of a vote in the meantime on a motion for recommitment.

After the agreement administration leaders conceded that the ship bill was "as good as dead." Not later than tomorrow tonight, it was said, the vote on recommitment would come, and the bill would "integrate with proper obsequies."

The chief burden of the filibuster was carried on yesterday by Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, who held the floor for five and a half hours, being relieved during the night session, by Senator Buckhart, Republican, Iowa, who spoke for nearly four hours.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—Possibilities that Henry Ford might be endorsed as the party's presidential candidate in 1924 overshadowed all other business before Michigan Democrats when they met in executive session today to nominate for minor state offices to be filled at the state elections.

Some of the party leaders promptly expressed the fear the proposed Ford endorsement might cause a split and turn the convention from a jollification over the party's success last fall into a divided camp.

FATHER'S HEROISM IN BLIZZARD TO

DEATH OF RICHLAND COUNTY FARMER

Wahpeton, N. D., Feb. 23.—A victim of the blizzard, John C. Wolfe, Richland county farmer, aged 31, was buried at Hankinson today, while at a hospital today here his widow, who was with him in the storm, underwent amputation of both hands and a foot.

For 32 hours Wolfe, his wife and their two children, a boy of 7 and a girl of two, were out in a raging blizzard, their only protection the rough side of a wagon box and the few coverings that farm people usually have with them.

The story of Wolfe's death was told here today—the story of a father's heroism in the face of overwhelming odds. The family had been visiting relatives and at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning set out for home. Five minutes later the storm broke with the suddenness of a tornado.

"We must go back," Wolfe shouted, and he turned his horses around on the road they had come, about the distance of two city blocks. As he turned he lost his bearing in the blinding wind, dust and snow.

"Back at the farm house the relatives, aged parents of Mrs. Wolfe, and a brother and sister, became frantic. The brother, 20 years old, started out to find the family but he could make no headway in the storm and was forced to come back.

All Night
It was late the next day before the storm abated and the search could be resumed.

Out in the field a hundred feet or so from the road the sled was found. The horses had been unhitched but had not moved. One was dead and the other was nearly frozen by the cold.

Nearly smothered between the ice-crusts blankets were the mother and children were huddled together. The father was standing upright, turned toward the Northwest, his body rigid, his arms outstretched to better protect the ones he loved.

Although both his arms and legs had been frozen solid and his face was seared, Wolfe lived several days. The children are living and well.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OPPOSES PLAN

All But Joe Doyle Against I. V. A. Election Measure

FAVOR REFERENDUM
Unalterably Opposed to Curtailing Party Action in State Affairs

Fargo, Feb. 23.—Inasmuch as the next state-wide election is still many months away it is not believed in Democratic circles that petitions for a referendum on the non-party election law passed last Tuesday by the state legislature will be circulated at present. Eventually, however, circulation of petitions is to be the next move in the Democratic party plan to erase the law from the statute books.

Petitions favoring a referendum was initiated here last yesterday afternoon at a conference of the executive committee of the party. At this meeting a resolution was adopted which declared that "we are unalterably opposed to any law which attempts to curtail party action as proposed in measures recently enacted by our state legislature and we pledge ourselves to do everything in our power to have such measures referred to a vote of the people at the earliest opportunity."

All members of the committee voted for this resolution except J. E. Doyle of Fargo, an additional member asked to sit in.

Under the referendum law of the state the acts may be referred to the voters upon petition of about 7,000 signers who are legal voters of the state. At the recall election in 1921 voters defeated initiative bills providing for non-party ballot in state elections by more than 10,000 majority.

NELSON COMMENTS ON BILL
Theodore Nelson, secretary of the Independent Voters Association, asked to comment on the reported action of the Democratic committee in Fargo in opposing the non-party election law said that he believed the members of the committee were not well informed as to the provisions of the three major election bills in the legislature and that if they were well informed they would not take such action as they are reported to have taken.

Irregular Leaders Deny That Chief Has Been Arrested— "Free Staters" Kidnaped

London, Feb. 23.—A central news dispatch from Dublin reports a rumor that the Free State government has arrested Sam DeValera and Liam Lynch. T. DeValera, the Irish criminal investigation department, the dispatch adds, made several important captures today. The men taken included five of the principal leaders. The authorities were extremely reticent as to the results of the operations but it is rumored that DeValera and Lynch were among those taken.

It is understood, the correspondence asserts, that the irregular army council was surprised in session in a house at Drumcree. A dispatch to the Evening Star from Dublin shortly after noon said that the secretary of William Cosgrave, head of the state government, denied that DeValera had been captured.

Deny Capture of De Valera
Belfast, Feb. 23.—A Dublin dispatch describing the capture of Sean Fitzpatrick says the men taken with him were his adjutant and three officers.

The criminal investigation department men, the account states, suddenly appeared at a door of the room of a house on Royce road, where the five men were seated at a table which was strewn with papers.

The official raiders showed no revolvers and shouted "hands up." The five men surrendered.

The Free State authorities, the message adds, denies reports that DeValera was captured.

20 IRREGULARS TAKEN
Dublin, Feb. 23.—More than 20 Irish irregulars were captured in Dublin last night and this morning, it was stated this afternoon. Additional raids are in progress.

Following the tribute paid to President Merrifield, announcement was made by the toastmaster that Mrs. Merrifield had established a Ten Thousand Dollar Student Loan Fund at the University as a memorial to the late Dr. Merrifield.

The next speaker was Mr. Scott Cameron, who pictured the life of the University in his decade, and called attention to the list of those from that decade which had won distinction.

The last decade was represented by Miss Dorothy Blanding of last year's graduating class. As a fitting conclusion to the program of memories, Miss Blanding pointed out the rapid development of the University in the past few years, showed that it had more than doubled its enrollment in the past five years, and gave a picture of the great University of today as compared with that of the previous decades.

Greetings Sent
Telegraphic greetings from the 250 Alumni who met in Grand Forks yesterday in commemoration of the event were read by the Toastmaster.

A letter of greetings from President Kane of the University, in which he commended the University to the unceasing loyalty of the Alumni was read by Justice H. A. Bronson.

R. E. Wenzel, President of the Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota, presented an inspirational talk on the value and necessity of the Alumni organization.

R. J. Murphy then took charge of the meeting, and the preliminary steps were taken toward the organization of a Bismarck-Mandan U. N. D. Club. Resolutions were passed and telegrams of greeting and appreciation were sent to Mrs. Webster Merrifield, and to the President and Faculty of the University.

The evening was concluded by the signing of Alma Mater.

Plans for the banquet had been worked out by Ernest Budge and Harold Shafe, who were congratulated for the success of the affair.

ADMINISTRATION BILLS TO BE PUSHED AHEAD IN LEGISLATURE TO AVOID RUSH OF LAST DAYS

Home Building Repeal and Other Measures Are Sent to Calendar in the House

WASTE LITTLE TIME

Income Tax Bill Also Goes in; Committee to Report Out Measures Promptly

Minneapolis, Feb. 23.—A warrant for the arrest of A. O. Jensen, superintendent of police, based on four indictments recently returned by the Grand Jury was issued today and placed in the hands of Sheriff Earle Brown for service.

Chief Jensen, who is charged with willful neglect of duty in failing to close up gambling and disorderly houses has been relieved of duty at his own request pending disposition of the charges.

A. C. Jensen, superintendent of police who was arrested today following his indictment on charges of "wilful neglect of duty" pleaded not guilty when arraigned in county district court, and trial was set for Feb. 28. Jensen was released on his own recognizance.

The administration bill for liquidation of the Home Building Association was sent to the calendar on committee report with a few scattering "noes" on a viva voce vote.

Senate bill No. 356 providing for a constitutional amendment re-enacting the $10,000,000 limit on bond issues for state industries and providing no bonds shall be issued unless an annual tax is levied to pay the interest also went on the calendar in the same manner, the majority report of the committee on the state having paid taxes for such minor amendments was accepted and the majority report favoring the 7 o'clock polls closing law was accepted but the bill later withdrawn by the committee for minor amendments.

The house, however, refused to put senate bill No. 375, validating the fifty percent settlement of bank taxes for the years 1919, 1920 and 1921 and authorizing county commissioners to compromise unpaid taxes "upon the same basis of settlement upon which nearly all the banks of the state have made such settlements" on the calendar and instead put it in general orders for discussion.

No bills were passed because yesterday was a holiday, but the house put in a busy five hours disposing of all other business before adjournment in a full day.

Married Women Bill Dies
The house ended excitement among the stenographers at the capitol when it indefinitely postponed senate bill No. 390, which would prohibit employment of married women in public offices in the state if they were supported by "able-bodied husbands able to earn a living wage." There was no record vote, but there were many "noes" when the vote was put. A minority committee report, in fact, suggested an amendment prohibiting married women from being members of the legislature. Mrs. Minnie Craig, the only married woman of the house, responded by the jest by suggesting the bill go into general orders so that she, also, could suggest some amendments.

The house killed the Ettestad senate bill No. 229, restoring the lower rate obtaining prior to 1917 for printing delinquent tax notices in official newspapers, by a vote of 52 to 39, without debate.

The minority of the banking committee sought to amend the bill validating the 50 percent settlement on bank stock taxes for the last three years when, through omission, the legislature failed to tax the banks. They desired to strike out the words "compromise" respecting

Bank Committee Action
The banking committee voted favorably on the bond bill providing a constitutional amendment for a bond issue to pay depositors of closed banks, senate bill No. 366 giving the state examiner power to order an assessment of a weak bank under the stockholders' double liability act; and S. B. 297 to aid the guaranty fund commission in clearing up affairs of insolvent banks, giving the supreme court original jurisdiction in liquidation proceedings.

Members of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau appeared before the insurance committee to protest the senate resolution calling on the bureau to cut its rates in half. The committee deferred action.

Increase Borrowing Power
Two bills for financing the state mill land elevator at Grand Forks were voted for recommendation for passage by the senate committee on state affairs today.

The bills are amended by the committee, however, so as to raise the limit of the bond issue for which they provide from one million to two million dollars and also to permit the mill and elevator to borrow through regular channels, rather than through the bond issue.

Rep. Jackson's bill to repeal the measure passed at the last session of the legislature for a state-owned electric plant at Bismarck will be recommended for indefinite postponement.

SAILOR WHO HIT KING GEORGE DEAD

Portland, Feb. 23.—Steven Deverill, 87, who was dead today at his home at Lindmond, a suburb, used to tell of how he once knocked down King George of England. Deverill was then a seaman in the British navy and the King was a strapping prince. According to the aged man's account of the incident he hit the youthful scion of royalty when the latter made a slighting remark about a seaman's cruise to Deverill's heart during a cruise in which the Prince was participating. "And he was a better man for it," the sailor concluded.

Join in War on Bill that Blocks Senate Business

Washington, Feb. 23.—An end of the senate shipping bill fight appeared near at hand today through an agreement made behind closed doors for a temporary armistice in a filibuster which has blocked all business since Monday.

In executive session the senate agreed to adjourn tonight at 6 o'clock, take up minor bills for two hours tomorrow and then proceed with the shipping bill, but with the possibility of a vote in the meantime on a motion for recommitment.

After the agreement administration leaders conceded that the ship bill was "as good as dead." Not that it was, but that the fight, rather than the bill, was the issue.

The chief burden of the filibuster was carried on yesterday by Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, who held the floor for five and a half hours, being relieved during the night session, by Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, who spoke for nearly four hours.

The house ended excitement among the stenographers at the capitol when it indefinitely postponed senate bill No. 390, which would prohibit employment of married women in public offices in the state if they were supported by "able-bodied husbands able to earn a living wage." There was no record vote, but there were many "noes" when the vote was put. Presidential Endorsement May Be Made Before Adjournment

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—Possibilities that Henry Ford might be endorsed as the party's presidential candidate in 1924 overshadowed all other business before Michigan Democrats when they met in convention here today to adopt a platform and nominate candidates for minor state offices to be filled at the state elections.

Some of the party leaders promptly expressed the fear that proposed Ford endorsement might cause a split and turn the convention from a jollification over the party's success last fall into a divided camp.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OPPOSES PLAN

All But Joe Doyle Against I. V. A. Election Measure

FAVOR REFERENDUM

Unalterably Opposed to Curtailing Party Action in State Affairs

Fargo, Feb. 23.—Inasmuch as the next state-wide election is still many months away it is not believed in Democratic circles that petitions for a referendum on the non-party election law passed last Tuesday by the state legislature will be circulated at present. Eventually, however, circulation of petitions is to be the next move in the Democratic party plan to erase the law from the statute books.

Petitions favoring a referendum was initiated here late yesterday afternoon at a conference of the executive committee of the party. At this meeting a resolution was adopted which declared that "we are unalterably opposed to any law which attempts to curtail party action as proposed in measures recently enacted by our state legislature and we pledge ourselves to do everything in our power to have such measures referred to a vote of the people at the earliest opportunity."

All members of the committee voted for this resolution except J. Doyle of Fargo, an additional member asked to sit in.

Under the referendum law of the state the acts may be referred to the voters upon petition of about 7,000 signers who are legal voters of the state. At the recall election in 1921 voters defeated initiated bills providing for no-party ballot in state elections by more than 10,000 majority.

NELSON COMMENTS ON BILL
Theodore Nelson, secretary of the Independent Voters Association, asked to comment on the reported action of the Democratic committee in Fargo in opposing the no-party election law said that he believed the members of the committee were not well informed as to the provisions of the three major election bills in the legislature and that if they were well informed they would not take such action as they are reported to have taken.

RUMOR THAT DE VALERA HAS BEEN TAKEN

Irregular Leaders Deny That Chief Has Been Arrested — "Free Staters" Kidnaped

London, Feb. 23.—A central news dispatch from Dublin reports a rumor that the Free State government has arrested Sammon DeValera and Liam Lynch. Detectives of the Irish criminal investigation department, the dispatch adds, made several important captures today. The men taken included five of the principal leaders. The authorities were extremely reticent as to the result of the operations but it is rumored that DeValera and Lynch were among those taken.

DAMAGE SUITS ARE SETTLED IN COURT HERE

Outgrowth of Automobile Accident on the Penitentiary Road

OTHER COURT ACTION

Three damage suits growing out of an automobile accident on the prison road east of the city on May 14, 1922, were settled in district court here after attorney had started to impeach the jury but before the trial began. The cases were directed against W. J. Bennett, who was driving on the road at the time of the accident, but were defended by the liability insurer, a company, with whom Mr. Bennett was protected.

Several occupants of one car, including Joseph Berger, Peter Allier and Mrs. Lisle, were injured in the accident. The settlement included $1,150 to Joseph Berger, $225 to Peter Allier, and $80 to Mrs. Lisle, and was satisfactory to the plaintiffs, according to their attorney, P. E. McCurdy. Mr. Bennett carried liability insurance with the Fidelity and Casualty company of New York through the P. E. Byrne Agency.

The jury in the case in which Charles Lawry sought damages from Peter Allier, Jr. and the latter from a count claim for damages, as a result of an automobile collision at Fifth street and Avenue C, found no damages in either case.

There was no session of district court today, it being a legal holiday.

Two criminal cases, one from Leonard and the other from Sheridan county, which were expected to be tried this week, were put over.

It is probable that a jury will be selected Saturday in the murder case against Kasimir Schneider charged with the death of his wife by poisoning, and the trial probably will begin Monday.

CHARGES HELD TO BE UNJUST

Opponents of Miklathun Resolution Make Public Correspondence

Opponents of the Miklathun resolution calling for an investigation of rulings made by Judge S. C. Johnson while he was a referee in bankruptcy and made rulings regarding the People's Supply Company of Grand Forks have made public parts of correspondence they declare show the baselessness of the charges. The rulings, they assert, show that William Lemke, then Attorney-General, and H. A. Paddock, then secretary of the Industrial Commission, both upheld Mr. Johnson's decision that the mill and elevator association was not a preferred creditor of the bankrupt concern.

In this connection the following extract from a letter written to Mr. Johnson by Hiram A. Libby of Grand Forks the attorney who handled the case for the mill and elevator association is of interest. Mr. Libby says:

"After briefing almost every conceivable question involved in this case as I did, and as you know, and after further consideration of the supreme court decision in the garnishment cases involving the Bank of North Dakota and also after Judge McKenna's decision I have felt that you did absolutely right in this case and that your decision was, and is, correct."

The correspondence shows that all of the papers in the case were forwarded to H. A. Paddock, secretary of the industrial commission on April 14, 1921 over seven months before the league industrial commission went out of office thus giving

FAMOUS FRENCH STATESMAN DELCASSE, FORMER FOREIGN MINISTER DIES SUDDENLY AFTER ACTIVE CAREER

Paris, Feb. 22.—Theophile Delcasse, former minister of foreign affairs, died suddenly at Nice last evening.

Theophile Delcasse was one of the most notable of French statesmen during the past 25 years, having to his credit, above all else, the inspiration which led to the formation of the Anglo-French Entente Cordiale.

Delcasse was born March 1, 1852, at Paniers, Department of Ariège, in that part of sunny southern France that has been a prolific producer of statesmen. He developed early interest in public affairs and served a sort of political apprenticeship in journalism. While he was on the staff of the "Republique Francaise" he was elected a member of the General Council of Ariège. In 1889 the district of Foix, in the same department, sent him to the chamber of deputies and regularly re-elected him for years thereafter.

Delcasse's first legislative work was in the naval, colonial and foreign relations committees, and he became one of the speakers who commanded the greatest attention of the chamber.

The Entente Cordiale between France and England was the groundwork of Delcasse's plan for strengthening the friendships of France. The Fashoda incident settled to Great Britain's satisfaction made it easy to broach more vital questions, and the negotiations between Paris and London developed into a general liquidation of all questions in which the two countries were interested. By abandoning certain historical rights to Newfoundland, and accepting definitely British occupation of Egypt, France obtained the carte blanche in Morocco and the famous Entente Cordiale was born.

Delcasse has been credited with an effective influence in the settlement of differences between Russia and Great Britain, and with the effacement of many subjects of contention that made it possible for the Entente Cordiale to be ample time for an appeal to the court.

No appeal was ever taken by Attorney-General William Lemke, and perhaps the reason for this lack of action is shown in a letter written by Mr. Paddock to the attorney-general under date of April 5, 1921. In this letter Mr. Paddock says:

"It would seem to me from these citations that there is some question about whether the State of North Dakota has a priority claim against the People's Supply Co."

Mr. Paddock also says:

"I have written Mr. Libby in accord with the advice of Mr. Lemke that hereafter the attorney-general's office will look after this matter and to forward the files."

Mr. Libby did forward the files on April 14. No further action was taken.

Governor in Letters to Taxation Committees Dwells on Economy

REFERS TO BILLS

Gov. R. A. Nestos in a letter addressed yesterday to chairman of the taxation and other committees having to do with appropriations again urged the strictest economy in legislation.

The governor summed up the legislative situation as follows:

"The number of bills still to be considered by the legislature has now narrowed down to such as have secured a majority vote in at least one of the houses. This will make it possible for the committees to which the bills are referred and for the houses to give to each of the remaining measures a more thorough consideration and thus insure the best possible solution of the problems confronting the legislative body."

"I desire at this time to urge upon you the need of the rigid economy, not only in state affairs but in the affairs of each of the political subdivisions of the state and that it is important that this legislation—section should do everything in its power to encourage and promote such economy and a curtailment of expenditures wherever possible in the counties, cities, villages, townships and school district of our state. The fact that only about ten percent of all the taxes paid in this state, except the tax for the soldiers' bonus, results from state appropriations, and from expenditures for state institutions and departments might incline the members to feel that after all, reductions in state appropriations will make but little difference in the tax payers burden; but I trust you will not permit this consideration to deter you from curtailing appropriations wherever it can be done without crippling our state institutions and state departments."

"However, it is in the counties, cities, villages, townships and school districts that reductions in expenditures must be made to bring about any substantial decrease in the tax burden. You can aid in this work not only by setting an example in the appropriations you make but also by enacting such legislation for the limitation of levies in these political subdivisions as will require such local boards as have been making unwise expenditures to economize until it hurts."

"By supplementing such limitations with a provision to the effect that by a vote of the people this limitation may be raised a certain percentage and that by a two-thirds majority it may be raised to a slightly larger percentage where that seems absolutely required, you will avoid the danger that any district where good business methods prevail will be crippled or seriously inconvenienced by the strictness of the limitations placed upon him."

"By this method you will help to curtail unwise expenditures and at the same time put the responsibility for increasing the levies in each district squarely upon the tax payers of such district."

Yours very truly,
R. A. NESTOS, Governor.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 22.—Plans for forming a national wheat growers association, to be known as the American Wheat Growers association, are practically completed, according to Geo. C. Jewett, general manager of the Northwest Wheat Growers, associated, who is chairman of the committee selected to draft a constitution and by-laws. Geo. E. The movement toward amalgamating the various state units of the Wheat Growers into a gigantic centralized organization was launched at a meeting held in this city in December, which representatives of ten state associations were gathered.

"Paying for needless strikes is an item in the cost of living that conceivably might be reduced."

When all is said, strikes are but the symptoms of an industrial disease, which is not eradicated when the strike is settled. If those engaged in the conduct of a business, whether they be employer or employee, will approach a controverted point in a spirit of justice, the differences can be adjusted satisfactorily and the strike made an unnecessary extravagance.

The record of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is a record of industrial peace. Employees of the organization always have had ample opportunity for bringing their grievances to the attention of the management, and during the past few years ways have been provided whereby these complaints can be adjusted with promptness and finality. This is called the Department of Industrial Relations.

Its function is to substitute evolution for revolution; to avert discontent; to prevent conditions which give rise to disorder and strikes.

Since inaugurating this Department of Industrial Relations we have had little or no labor troubles and these have been adjusted as soon as the facts could be set forth, and opportunity given to demonstrate the justice of each side to the controversy.

Team-work is the fundamental base upon which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) efficiency is built. To calculate the value of this efficiency in terms of money one has but to figure the cost of disorganization, discomfort, and expense which the people in the Middle Western States have suffered through industrial strife. As petroleum products enter into every phase of life to an extent which appears incredible to the laity, uncertainty or scarcity in the supplying of these products would affect the daily life of the individual definitely, unfavorably, disastrously.

Both the management and the employees of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) recognize team-work as a definite necessary part of this organization. HOLD EXERCISES

Forty-five bills are reported in for passage by committees of the senate at the session yesterday afternoon and were placed upon the calendar for third reading and final passage.

Committees continued work last night, and were on the job this morning with the result it is expected that by the time the session opens this afternoon committee action will have been taken on two-thirds of the measures which the senate must act on during the seven working days which remain of the legislative session.

The senate committee on state affairs reported in for passage House Bill 365, the administration measure for an increase in the real estate bond issue of the Bank of North Dakota. The original bill called for an issue of fifteen million dollars, but after a conference with the governor and attorney general the committee amended the bill to make the limit twenty-five million, and as so amended the bill is now on the senate calendar for passage.

The bill to make the soldiers' bonus more promptly payable was one of those which was reported in for passage today. It is not amended in the committee report.

Urges Election Bill
House Bill 282, one of the three companion bills passed by the house for the revision of the present election laws, was recommended for passage in the senate by the committee on elections, and the report was accepted without opposition from the Nonpartisan league senators.

There was no opposition to the recommendation for passage of House Bill 145, which provides for the liquidation of the defunct state creamery at Warner. Other measures reported in were several amending the Workmen's compensation act in minor particulars, and several routine appropriation bills.

Senator Gross of Grant county today introduced a concurrent resolution to memorialize congress to stabilize prices by the enactment of legislation to attach a definite ration to values based on wheat, cotton or some similar standard. The resolution was referred to the committee on judiciary.

The senate also adopted a concurrent resolution expressing regret over the death of the late Ole Aavig of Milton.

Pay Tribute
During the first hour of the session yesterday afternoon exercises were held by the senate in honor of Washington's Birthday. Senator L. Baird presided, and addresses were given by Senator W. D. Lynch of LaMoure, and L. F. Crawford, secretary of the North Dakota Industrial commission.

Senator Lynch stressed the importance of clinging to the ideals which animated Washington, and those who fought and worked with him. "We must go and perpetuate these ideals," he said. "The institutions of this country were not made by us, they were here before us, it is for us to perpetuate them by the laws we make, the work we do, and the lives we live."

Mr. Crawford spoke on "Washington as a business man." He called attention to the fact that Washington, at the time he was called to the command of the American Army during the revolution was probably the wealthiest man in the colonies. This fact was largely responsible for the choice falling upon him, and it enabled him to be far more useful than would otherwise have been the case.

Such facts as these were well to bear in mind at the present day Mr. Crawford said, on account of the Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results. Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abortive operation or die. He did neither. He cured himself instead.

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method; it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. The book and medicine are FREE. They will be sent prepaid to any ruptured sufferer who will fill out the below coupon. But send it right away—now—before you put down this paper.

JAPAN'S LEADING MEDICS TO VISIT U.S.

Tokio, Feb. 23.—The first Medical Commission ever sent from Japan to the United States, will sail from Yokohama on February 23rd, on board the Taiyo Maru, in response to an invitation from Dr. Vincent, as President of the Rockefeller Foundation. Those composing this Commission, have been carefully selected from the foremost leaders of the medical profession in Japan, and are men of international reputation. The chairman of the Commission, Professor Miura, is the physician to the Emperor, and each one of the scientists on the Commission has an established reputation for leadership in his own selected specialty. The Rockefeller Foundation invited the Commission to the United States as the guests of the Foundation, and after the Commission has made a tour inspecting the leading medical centers, in the United States, they will return to the Pacific Coast via Canada, where they will also visit the most prominent of the Canadian medical universities.

The trip will probably last about three months.

In issuing the invitation, it is the purpose of the Rockefeller Foundation not only to have the pleasure of entertaining these gentlemen, but to add to the solidarity of closer affiliations between the medical profession of North America and Japan. The Commission is proceeding under the authority of the Foreign Office, and it will not only add, it is hoped, very materially to warmer friendship between the scientists of America and Japan, but be a real contribution to closer international friendship and understanding between the two countries.

The members of the Commission are: Professor Kinoshita Miura, Chairman, Professor of Internal Medicine, University of Tokio;

Professor Mataro Nagayo, Director of Government Institute for Infectious Diseases; Professor Sachihiro Hata, Director of Kitasato Institute for Infectious Disease Research; Professor Akira Fujinami, Professor of Pathology, Kyoto Imperial University; Professor Keinosuke Miyairi, Professor of Hygiene, Kyushu Imperial University; Baron Yoshihito Takagi, Chief Surgeon and Director of Tokio Charity Hospital.

YANK DOLLARS HOLD CHARMS FOR GERMANS

Berlin, Feb. 23.—American dollars hold a magic charm for Germans. Since the quotation of the dollar has run well above 20,000 marks, that coin is regarded as charmed. Newspapers display quotations of the dollar in black type on their first pages. It stands alone. Quotations on English, Swiss and Scandinavian money are relegated to the market pages.

An American woman who lives in Berlin was recently approached by a seven-year old German boy, the playmate of her son, who hesitatingly asked: "Won't you please show me a real dollar?" She handed him a dollar bill to examine, and the boy fingered it for some time in complete silence before protesting: "But its just paper; haven't you a real one?"

The woman explained she had no silver dollar, but assured him the American paper was just as good as the silver, and even more valuable if one wanted to sell it at the bank.

The little fellow wasn't persuaded. He thanked the American woman very politely and walked away in a deep study over the intricacies of currency.

In shops foreigners are frequently asked for dollars. Shopkeepers and clerks are anxious to have at least one as a souvenir. No American who desires to send a gift to a German friend can do better than mail crisp, new American bills. The high rate of exchange on the dollar is almost the sole topic of conversation at mixed gatherings, and fortunate is the man who can produce an American bill before astonished friends.

WOULD PRESENT FARMERS' CASE TO ALL PEOPLE

Resolutions Specifically Urges
Outline Before Commercial People

Cooperstown N. D., Feb. 22.—Farmers and business men, in meeting here, have drawn resolutions urging attendance of Governor Nestos at the Northwest Price Stabilization Congress at St. Paul Feb. 27 and 28, urging a large and influential delegation be selected to represent North Dakota and setting forth in resolutions a statement of conditions and remedies. The statement of proposed remedies follows:

Remedies Proposed.
1.—We believe that every financial aid in the way of cheap money and low interest-rates possible from any source should be gotten and that quickly, for the benefit of the farmer.
2.—That the state enter at once into the matter of aiding the farmer in the storing and holding of his commodities for a better market. We are convinced that the state can do more in this line than it can in either manufacturing or marketing. It could, for the storing of grain, co-operate with local concerns for storing at points of origin, thus saving freight and handling until the time comes to sell. Plans could easily be effected for farmers to co-operate in filling special bins to be held in the warehouse where stored, and the state or Federal government might easily co-operate with local banks to give money advances upon such grain at lowest commercial interest rates.
3.—We appeal most strongly for a simple and understandable system of grain grading which shall be uniform from one year to the other with control or at least final appeal and decision removed from the influence of the terminal markets.
4.—We pray for relief from over charges on railroad transportation. We point out that our state is one of the best in the union for cheap rail road construction and economical operation. While we admit we should pay much higher average rates than central or eastern states; but we believe that all freight costs in the whole country should be reduced at once.
5.—We ask that the situation, especially of the northwestern farmer, be placed clearly before all classes of industrial and commercial people of other states, to the end that they may become interested in measures for relief of agricultural interests. We believe that we shall need their co-operation, or at least their acquiescence in anything to be done for the farmers, and we believe that we shall be able to secure their help if we convince them of our need."

JOIE W. RAY OUT TO BEAT MILE RECORD

Boston, Feb. 23.—To run the fastest mile credited to man is the ambition of Joie W. Ray, the little Illinois A. C. athlete who has been fairly burning up the boards with his speed on indoor tracks this winter. Until he has had a serious fling at the attempt under proper conditions he will give no thought to retiring, he says.

Ray sets 4 minutes and 10 seconds as within his striding powers for the mile distance. The fastest mile run by man of which there is any record stands to the credit of Norman S. Taber, then a student of Brown University, 4 minutes, 12 3-5 seconds. Ray is confident that he can better that time. Coaches of college and club track teams, familiar with the little taxi-driver's running ability, agree with him, provided he has the conditions that Taber had.

The Brown student broke all records running on the track at the Harvard Stadium in 1916 against picked opponents who acted as his pedometers. Such an arrangement is regarded as necessary to bring a better performance from Ray, and Ray indicates that he would welcome an invitation to make such an attempt sometime during the coming summer. The Harvard Stadium, however, probably will not be available for the test, unless some set of games not now scheduled is arranged.

Ray has set himself, as secondary objects, the breaking of the American indoor records for the two mile run, 9 minutes 11 2-5 seconds, and for the 3000 meter run, 8 minutes, 31 2-5 seconds, (both of which he holds himself) and that of 8 minutes 10 3-5 seconds for the 1 3-4 miles, held by the old-timer George V. Bonhag.

In his campaigning this season he has shown himself at top speed, breaking the record for the mile and one-third at New York recently, and three days later jumping over to Boston and racing away with the Hunter Mile again in a new record for that event, 4 minutes 19 seconds. He held the indoor record for the mile of 4 minutes 14 3-5 seconds, made four years ago, but says he is running better now than ever before.

Ray attributes much of his success to his ability to judge his pace. A year ago, he declared, before he went to the starting line in the Hunter Mile, that he would run it in 4 minutes, 20 seconds. He set a new record in 4 minutes, 20 2-5 seconds. This year he said in advance that he would run it in 4 minutes 19 seconds. He won in 4 minutes 19 seconds, a furlong ahead of the field. Opponents do not worry him, the confident little racer says, because he is thus able to set his own standards, and his legs sustain the task assigned them.

Joie became a runner while he was training to be a boxer, and still aspires to gaining ring greatness some day.

SEES DANGER IN PARDONING OF RADICALS

Chicago, Feb. 23.—A current era of "increased congressional demagoguery in utterance, flaunting of radical doctrines, pardoning of men convicted of treason and inciting of lawless action by the wily power of certain labor leaders," was Mr. Average Citizen's panoramic as pictured by Charles G. Dawes, former director of the national budget, in an address before the Union League club last night.

Mentioning no names, save a tribute to "our great, strong and determined President Harding," Mr. Dawes said:

"The average American citizen has witnessed the pardoning of men convicted of treason against their government in time of war, done with the apparent purpose of carrying political favor with the disreputable elements of our population. "Here in Chicago he has seen a mayor elected upon a Republican ticket announce a platform which would do credit to soviet Russia and seeks to force it through a Republican state convention.

"In Congress, he has witnessed in the last few years more demagoguery in utterance than ever before has characterized it.

"He has witnessed a newly elected senator rush into the senate debates with radical, inflammatory and untrue statements.

"He was shocked by the human beasts at Herrin and the lawless acts at Harrison, Ark.

"We have seen tremendous power wielded by certain labor leaders who understand mob psychology and the influence of radicals who lead masses of people to lawless action."

Mr. Average Citizen in demanding a new bill of rights, Mr. Dawes declared, "because the power of organized minorities has become as dangerous to the liberty of the individuals as ever was the power of a prince."

"He who reasons that a halt to weakness in law enforcement and demagoguery is not about to be called and that conditions will become worse, little understands the American people. Some progress has been made—that from the Adamson law to the Daugherty injunction, which in my judgment, future generations will regard as the beginning of a new era of law and order. Through it our government announces the right of a man to work as he is sacred as the right of a man to stop work."

HOSKINS-MEYER STUNT PRETTY AT MARDI GRAS

Elk's Quartet Numbers Prove Big Hit of the Evening

One of the hits of the recent Mardi Gras was the fine display of Hoskins-Meyer company. Master "Bobbie" Hoskins drew a wagon upon which was mounted the various stationery lines of the company. As an introduction of the skit there was a very fine presentation of the "Victoria" department. Drawn across the stage headed by Victoria trade marks was a wagon with Victoria records for wheels. Mounted upon the wagon was a Victoria upon which was played a selection.

To represent the floral department was Miss Kathleen Murphy dressed as a bride with a very pretty bouquet. The wedding march was played as she walked across the stage. To advertise the kodak department Miss Murphy displayed a popular model and took a snapshot of the audience.

A slight error was made in designating Mr. Gale's act. He represented the Dakota Fine Arts and not the Elk as stated.

Members of the Elk's quartet including Harry Wagner at the piano were: Arthur Dargan, Jack Franey, Matt Neibauer. They were encored repeatedly.

Names of firms not putting on skits but entering the list were displayed on a screen. These names were published previously in The Tribune.

In the stunt representing popular brands handled by Roy Logan the children who acted their parts so well were Irma Fern Logan and James Watson Taylor.

The baby drawn across the stage in the "Bismarck Baby" stunt was Gene Hendrickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hendrickson. The child's complete self possession and beauty made the skit attractive indeed.

Rep. Vogel, McLean, also declared the bill as drawn would permit a small number of banks which refused to join the rest of the banks in voluntarily paying the tax, to escape with a less settlement. He opposed this. The bill will be threshed out tomorrow.

To Seek Amendments

The Nonpartisans planned to offer the same amendments to the income tax bill which Senator Baker, Nonpartisan, will fight to incorporate in the senate, the minority of the tax committee announced.

The game and fish commission's bill, senate bill No. 155, went to third reading after being amended to strike out a provision requiring hunters to report by Dec. 31 all game killed during the year, or be refused a license for the next year. Rep. Maddock attempted to get a reduction of the license fee from $1.50 to $1.00, and was charged with seeking in this manner to hurt the department under the independent administration, but the amendment failed. An amendment to permit muskrats trapping from Dec. 20 to March 10, instead of from Jan. 10 to March 10 also failed. The annual license fee for persons obtaining license to use seines, drag nets and traps in the Des Moines lake, Mouse river and Missouri river was fixed at $1.50.

ARMLESS STUDENT WINS HONORS AT HER UNIVERSITY

Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 23.—Armless birth, Martha Hale, freshman at the University of California here, has taught herself not only to do with her feet practically everything that the physically normal girl of twenty can do with her hands, including cooking writing, sewing and dressing herself, but intends to teach others who are crippled to help themselves. For this purpose, she is taking a special course in social service.

All her life Miss Hale's attitude has been one of optimism and self-reliance. A slender wisp of a girl, she has never learned the meaning of "Can't." She is an excellent student, paints china, embroiders and loves to swim and dance. Among her schoolmates she has long since been accepted as "one of the crowd."

During the war Miss Hale visited many government hospitals where maimed soldiers were fighting their way back to an armless life.

"Once I could convince them," she said, that feet could be quite as useful as hands, they began to take interest in feet that the world was not really going to end for them."

The Royal Neighbors will hold their food sale Saturday afternoon Feb. 24 at Hoskins-Meyer.

HOW TO USE VICKS VAPORUB FOR DEEP GRIPPY COLDS

First, It Is Very Important That a Thorough Rubefacient Or Counter-Irritant Effect Be Produced On the Surface Of the Skin Around the Lungs.

This Draws the Blood From the Congested Lungs and Lessens the Danger of Pneumonia.

THEN TREAT WITH VICKS

Deep, grippy colds, frequently leading to pneumonia, have been unusually prevalent this winter. In some sections they are called influenza, but are so much milder than the influenza cases during the first epidemic that health authorities have not agreed as to whether these cases are all due to the same infections, or even whether there has been any real influenza.

"Flu" Germ Discovered

New light has been thrown upon these matters by the announcement by Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, that the germ of influenza has been identified. The Institute staff, thru experiments on rabbits, has found how this germ injures the lung tissue so that it is no longer able, as it is in health, to destroy the common bacteria of the nose and throat that cause bronchitis and pneumonia.

Dr. Flexner also says, "Recent reports received from abroad and from points in the United States indicate that a secondary wave of epidemic influenza, relatively mild in character, is passing over parts of Europe and America."

The Danger Is From Pneumonia.

If, therefore, behooves anybody who develops a deep grippy cold to take his case seriously and work fast if all danger of pneumonia is to be avoided. What is needed is something to decrease the congestion of the lungs. For this purpose there is nothing like a rubefacient or counter-irritant, as witness the use of blisters, poultices and plasters for generations. This counter-irritant reddens the skin—draws the blood from the congested parts to the surface; the circulation is improved; there is a sense of warmth and the possibility of pneumonia is greatly lessened.

Quick Counter-Irritant Needed.

The value of this counter-irritant effect is greatly increased if it is produced quickly. Nearly every family has its favorite method—onion poultices, turpentine stipes, mustard plasters and poultices of various kinds all are good.

A very simple method is to apply towels wrung out in hot water, as hot as the patient can stand. This not only reddens the skin quickly, but also opens the pores so that more Vicks can be absorbed. Some, however, prefer to use an ordinary mustard plaster, as the reddening effect lasts longer.

Parts To Be Treated.

Whatever method is used, the application should be applied over the throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. In very deep colds, the side and especially the back from the middle of the shoulder blades to a point just above the waist, should also be treated.

The patient should be given a good purgative and, if convenient, a hot mustard footbath for ten minutes—one tablespoon of mustard to a gallon of water.

Rub Vicks In, Then Spread On.

After the skin is thoroughly reddened, it should be dried lightly and immediately the patient should be given a brisk massage with Vicks all over the parts. Continue this for five minutes. This increases the counter-irritant effect. Then apply Vicks thickly over all

NEW LIGNITE TESTS MADE

Canadian Lignite Coal Is Tested at State "U"

Grand Forks, Feb. 23.—R. A. Strong, of the Canadian Government Lignite Utilization Board, who has been in charge of a series of coal tests conducted at the University of North Dakota, left Wednesday for points in Canada. Other representatives of the Canadian government assisting Mr. Strong left earlier in the week.

Mr. Strong has been at work at the university for about two weeks, having begun the series of tests February 6. Three cars of lignite coal from the Canadian beds were shipped to the university for testing in the special design of oven used in North Dakota lignite tests. This oven was designed jointly by Dean E. J. Babcock, of the university, and representatives of the United States Bureau of Mines for the purpose of carbonizing lignite in the briquetting process.

One of the research laboratories of the School of Mines has been used in the investigation. The purpose of Mr. Strong's visit here was to learn whether or not the Canadian coal could be handled successfully in the special oven. Upon completion of the tests, he gave out no information as to results, due to the fact that he is required first to make an official report of the Canadian government. While in the state he made a visit to the mining experiment station at Hebron, N. D., to gather further data concerning his investigation. W. W. Odell, of the United States Bureau of Mines, who worked with Dean Babcock in testing the North Dakota lignite last summer, was at the university for a while to assist in the study of the Canadian fuel.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Senator Underwood of Alabama has closed his service as Democratic leader of the senate, and accompanied by Mrs. Underwood has left on a four months trip to Europe, following completion of all the regular appropriation bills of the senate and being assured by President Harding there will be no early call of a special session of the new congress.

HOSKINS-MEYER STUNT PRETTY AT MARDI GRAS

Elk's Quartet Numbers Prove Big Hit of the Evening

One of the hits of the recent Mardi Gras was the fine display of Hoskins-Meyer company. Master "Bobbie" Hoskins drew a wagon upon which was mounted the various stationary lines of the company. As an introduction of the skit there was a very fine presentation of the Victrola department. Driven across the stage headed by Victor trade marks was a wagon with Victrola records for wheels. Mounted upon the wagon was a Victrola upon which was played a selection.

To represent the floral department was Miss Kathleen Murphy dressed as a bride with a very pretty bouquet. The wedding march was played as she walked across the stage. To advertise the kodak department Miss Murphy displayed a popular model and took a snapshot of the audience.

A slight error was made in designating Mr. Gale's act. He represented the Dakota Fine Arts and not the Elks as stated.

Members of the Elk's quartet including Harry Wagner at the piano were: Arthur Dargan, Jack Franey, Matt Neibauer. They were encored repeatedly.

Names of firms not putting on skits but entering the list were displayed on a screen. These names were published previously in The Tribune.

In the stunt representing popular brands handled by Roy Logan the children who acted their parts so well were Irma Fern Logan and James Watson Taylor.

The baby drawn across the stage in the Bismarck Dairy float was Eugene Hendrickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hendrickson. The child's complete self possession and beauty made the skit attractive indeed.

Rep. Vogel, McLean, also declared the bill as drawn would permit a small number of banks which refused to join the rest of the banks in voluntarily paying the tax, to escape with a less settlement. He opposed this. The bill will be threshed out tomorrow.

To Seek Amendments

The Nonpartisans planned to offer the same amendments to the income tax bill which Senator Baker, Nonpartisan, will fight to incorporate in the senate, the minority of the tax committee announced.

The game and fish commission's bill, senate bill No. 155, went to third reading after being amended to strike out a provision requiring hunters to report by Dec. 31 all game killed during the year, or be refused a license for the next year. Rep. Madock attempted to get a reduction of the license fee from $1.50 to $1.00, and was charged with seeking in this manner to hurt the department under the independent administration, but the amendment failed. An amendment to permit muskrat trapping from Dec. 20 to March 10, instead of from Jan. 10 to March 10 also failed. The annual license fee for persons obtaining license to use seines, drag nets and traps in the Des Moines lake, Mouse river and Missouri river was fixed at $1.50.

W. F. Cushing of Bach, chief clerk of the house, who has been ill for several days, was back at his desk.

ARMLESS STUDENT WINS HONORS AT HER UNIVERSITY

Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 23.—Armless since birth, Martha Hale, freshman at the University of California here, has taught herself not only to do with her feet practically everything that the physically normal girl of twenty can do with her hands, including cooking, writing, sewing and dressing herself, but intends to teach others who are crippled to help themselves. For this purpose, she is taking a special course in social service.

All her life Miss Hale's attitude has been one of optimism and self-reliance. A slender wisp of a girl, she has never learned the meaning of "cant." She is an excellent student, paints china, embroiders and "loves to swim and dance." Among her schoolmates she has long since been accepted as "one of the crowd."

During the war Miss Hale visited many government hospitals where maimed soldiers were fighting their way back to an armless life.

"Once I could convince them," she said, that feet could be quite as useful as hands, they began to take interest, to feel that the world was not really going to end for them."

HOW TO USE VICKS VAPORUB FOR DEEP GRIPPY COLDS

First, It Is Very Important That a Thorough Rubefacient Or Counter-Irritant Effect Be Produced On the Surface Of the Skin Around the Lungs.

This Draws the Blood From the Congested Lungs and Lessens the Danger of Pneumonia.

THEN TREAT WITH VICKS

Deep, grippy colds, frequently leading to pneumonia, have been unusually prevalent this winter. In some sections they are called influenza, but are so much milder than the influenza cases during the first epidemic that health authorities have not agreed as to whether these cases are all due to the same infection, or even whether there has been any real influenza.

"Flu" Germ Discovered

New light has been thrown upon these matters by the announcement by Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, that the germ of influenza has been identified. The institute staff, thru experiments on rabbits, has found how this germ injures the lung tissue so that it is no longer able, as it is in health, to destroy the common bacteria of the nose and throat that cause bronchitis and pneumonia.

Dr. Flexner also says, "Recent reports received from abroad and from points in the United States indicate that a secondary wave of epidemic influenza, relatively mild in character, is passing over parts of Europe and America."

The Danger Is From Pneumonia.

It, therefore, behooves anybody who develops a deep grippy cold to take his case seriously and work fast if all danger of pneumonia is to be avoided. What is needed is something to decrease the congestion of the lungs. "For this purpose there is nothing like a rubefacient or counter-irritant, as witnesses the use of blisters, poultices and plasters for generations. This counter-irritant reddens the skin—draws the blood from the congested parts to the surface; the circulation is improved; there is a sense of warmth and the possibility of pneumonia is greatly lessened.

Quick Counter-Irritant Needed.

The value of this counter-irritant effect is greatly increased if it is produced quickly. Nearly every family has its favorite method—onion poultices, turpentine stupes, mustard plasters and poultices of various kinds all are good.

A very simple method is to apply towels wrung out in hot water, as hot as the patient can stand. This not only reddens the skin quickly, but also opens the pores so that more Vicks can be absorbed. Some, however, prefer to use an ordinary mustard plaster, as the reddening effect lasts longer.

Whatever method is used, the application should be applied over the throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. In very deep colds, the side and especially the back from the middle of the shoulder blades to a point just above the waist, should also be treated.

The patient should be given a good purgative and, if convenient, a hot mustard footbath for ten minutes—one tablespoon of mustard to a gallon of water.

Rub Vicks In, Then Spread On.

After the skin is thoroughly reddened, it should be dried lightly and immediately the patient should be given a brisk massage with Vicks all over the parts. Continue this for five minutes. This increases the counter-irritant effect. Then apply Vicks thickly over all

NEW LIGNITE TESTS MADE

Canadian Lignite Coal Is Tested at State "U"

Grand Forks, Feb. 23.—R. A. Strong, of the Canadian Government Lignite Utilization Board, who has been in charge of a series of coal tests conducted at the University of North Dakota, left Wednesday for points in Canada. Other representatives of the Canadian government assisting Mr. Strong left earlier in the week.

Mr. Strong has been at work at the university for about two weeks, having begun the series of tests February 6. Three cars of lignite coal from the Canadian beds were shipped to the university for testing in the special design of ovens used in North Dakota lignite tests. This oven was designed jointly by Dean E. J. Babcock, of the university, and representatives of the United States Bureau of Mines for the purpose of carbonizing lignite in the briquetting process.

One of the research laboratories of the School of Mines has been used in the investigation. The purpose of Mr. Strong's visit here was to learn whether or not the Canadian coal could be handled successfully in the special oven. Upon completion of the tests, he will furnish information to the results, due to the fact that he is required first to make an official report of the Canadian government.

While in the state he made a visit to the mining experiment station at Hebron, N. D., to gather further data concerning his investigation. W. W. Odell, of the United States Bureau of Mines, who worked with Dean Babcock in testing the North Dakota lignite last summer, was at the university for a while to assist in the study of the Canadian fuel.

Advocates use of Newspaper Publicity

In an interview today, Mr. Warren Wright, President of the Calumet Baking Powder Company—the largest Baking Powder Company in the World, strongly advocated the use of newspaper advertising, and points to Calumet's success as proof of his statement.

Sales 2½ Times As Much

"Calumet sales are 2½ times as much as any other brand" stated Mr. Wright, "and we attribute this to our lavish use of newspaper space. We believe that the newspaper is the most direct medium we can use in getting our message across to the housewife and we know from our experience covering thirty years, that the housewife will respond to newspaper advertising quicker than she will to any other form of advertising."

"The housewives have confidence in newspaper advertisements because they know that the newspapers set up high standards for their advertisers. It is for that reason that the housewife looks to the newspaper for information on products in which she is interested."

COMMITTEES RUSH WORK IN STATE SENATE

Expect at Least Two-Thirds of the House Bills to be Disposed of This Week

HOLD EXERCISES

Forty-five bills are reported in for passage by committees of the senate at the session yesterday afternoon and were placed upon the calendar for third reading and final passage.

Committees continued work last night and were on the job this morning with the result it is expected that by the time the session opens this afternoon committee action will have been taken on two-thirds of the measures which the senate must act on during the seven working days which remain of the legislative session.

The senate committee on state affairs reported in for passage House bill 305, the administration measure for an increase in the real estate bond issue of the Bank of North Dakota. The original bill called for an issue of fifteen million dollars, but after a conference with the governor and attorney general the committee amended the bill to make the limit twenty-five million, and as so amended the bill is now on the senate calendar for passage.

The bill to make the soldier's bonus more promptly payable was one of those which was reported in for passage today. It is not amended in the committee report.

House Bill 282, one of the three companion bills passed by the house for the revision of the present election laws, was recommended for passage in the senate by the committee on elections, and the report was accepted without opposition from the Nonpartisan league senators.

There was no opposition to the recommending for passage of House Bill 115, which provides for the liquidation of the defunct state creamery at Warner. Other measures reported in were several amending the Workmen's compensation act in minor particulars, and several routine appropriation bills.

Senator Gross of Grant county today introduced a concurrent resolution to memorialize congress to stabilize prices by the enactment of legislation to attach a definite ration to values based on wheat, cotton or some similar standard. The resolution as referred to the committee on judiciary.

The senate also adopted a concurrent resolution expressing regret over the death of the late Ole Axxvig of Milton.

Pay Tribute

During the first hour of the session yesterday afternoon exercises were held by the senate in honor of Washington's Birthday. Senator L. B. Baird presided, and addresses were given by Senator W. D. Lynch of LaMoure, and L. F. Crawford, secretary of the North Dakota Industrial commission.

Senator Lynch stressed the importance of clinging to the ideals which animated Washington, and those who fought and worked with him. "We must go and perpetuate these ideals," he said. "The institutions of this country were not made by us, they were here before us, it is for us to perpetuate them by the laws we make, the work we do, and the lives we live."

Mr. Crawford spoke on "Washington as a business man." He called attention to the fact that Washington, at the time he was called to the command of the American Army during the revolution was probably the wealthiest man in the colonies. This fact was largely responsible for the choice falling upon him, and it enabled him to be far more useful than would otherwise have been the case.

Such facts as these were well to bear in mind at the present day, Mr. Crawford said, on account of the

JAPAN'S LEADING MEDICS TO VISIT U.S.

Tokio, Feb. 23.—The first Medical Commission ever sent from Japan to the United States, will sail from Yokohama on February 24th, on board the Taiyo Maru in response to an invitation from Dr. Vincent, as President of the Rockefeller Foundation. Those composing this Commission, have been carefully selected from the foremost leaders of the medical profession in Japan, and are men of international reputation. The chairman of the Commission, Professor Miura, is the physician to the Emperor, and each one of the scientists on the Commission has an established reputation for leadership in his own selected specialty. The Rockefeller Foundation invited the Commission to the United States as the guests of the Foundation, and after the Commission has made a tour inspecting the leading medical centers, in the United States, they will return to the Pacific Coast via Canada, where they will also visit the most prominent of the Canadian medical universities.

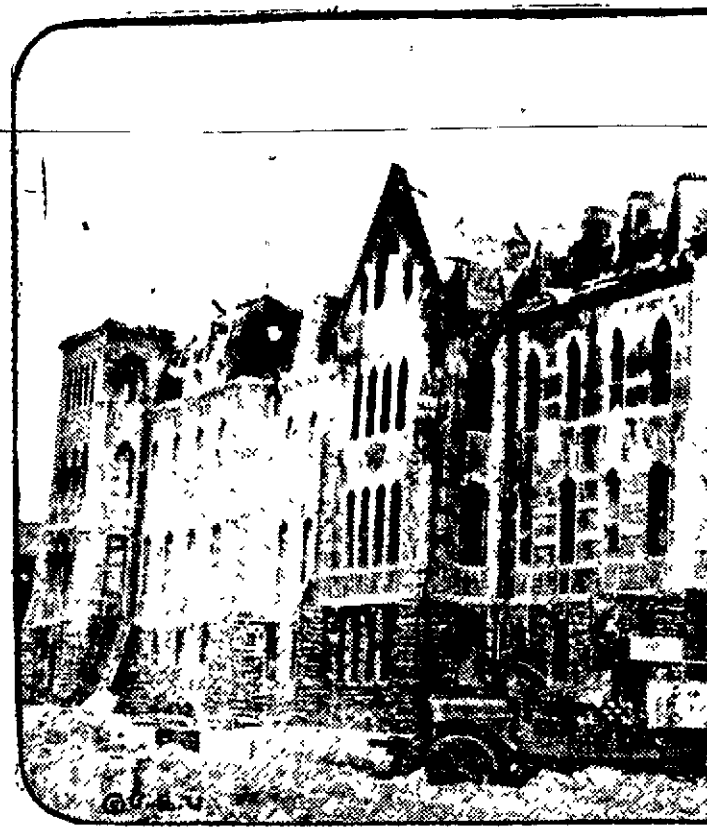

The trip will probably last about three months.

In issuing the invitation, it is the purpose of the Rockefeller Foundation not only to have the pleasure of entertaining these gentlemen, but to add to the solidarity of closer affiliations between the medical profession of North America and Japan. The Commission is proceeding under the authority of the Foreign Office, and it will not only add, it is hoped, very materially to warmer friendship between the scientists of America and Japan, but be a real contribution to lasting international friendship and understanding between the two countries.

The members of the Commission are: Professor Kinokuni Miura, Chairman, Professor of Internal Medicine, University of Tokio;

Professor Mataro Nagayo, Director of Government Institute for Infectious Diseases; Professor Saha-chiro Hata, Director of Kitasato Institute for Infectious Disease Research; Professor Akira Fujiwara, Professor of Pathology, Kyoto Imperial University; Professor Kinokuni Miyairi, Professor of Hygiene, Kyushu Imperial University; Baron Yoshihiro Takagi, Chief Surgeon and Director of Tokio Charity Hospital.

WOULD PRESENT FARMERS' CASE TO ALL PEOPLE

Resolutions Specifically Urges Outline Before Commercial People

Cooperstown N. D., Feb. 22.—Farmers and business men, in meeting here, have drawn resolutions urging attendance of Governor Nestos at the Northwest Power Utilization Congress at St. Paul Feb. 27 and 28, urging a large and influential delegation be selected to represent North Dakota and setting forth in resolutions a statement of conditions and remedies. The statement of proposed remedies follows:

Remedies Proposed.

1.—We believe that every financial aid in the way of cheap money and low interest-rates possible from any source should be gotten and that quickly for the benefit of the farmer.

2.—That the state enter at once into the matter of aiding the farmer in the storing and holding of his commodities for a better market. We are convinced that the state can do more in this line than it can in either manufacturing or marketing. It could, for the storing of grain, co-operate with local concerns for storing at points of origin, thus saving freight and handling until the time comes to sell. Plans could easily be effected for farmers to co-operate in filling special bins to be held in the warehouse where stored, and the state or Federal government might easily co-operate with local banks to give money advances upon such grain at lowest commercial interest rates.

3.—We appeal most strongly for a simple and understandable system of grain grading which shall be uniform from one year to the other with control or at least final appeal and decision removed from the influence of the terminal markets.

4.—We pray for relief from over charges on railroad transportation. We point out that our state is one of the best in the union for cheap railroad construction and economical operation. We cannot see why we should pay much higher average rates than central or eastern states; but we believe that all freight costs in the whole country should be reduced at once.

5.—We ask that the situation, especially of the northwestern farmer, be placed clearly before all classes of industrial and commercial people of other states, to the end that they may become interested in measures for relief of agricultural interests. We believe that we shall need their co-operation, or at least their acquiescence in anything to be done for the farmers, and we believe that we shall be able to secure their help if we convince them of our need.

JOIE W. RAY OUT TO BEAT MILE RECORD

Boston, Feb. 23.—To run the fastest mile credited to man is the ambition of Joie W. Ray, the little Illinois A. C. athlete who has been fairly burning up the boards with his speed on indoor tracks this winter. Until he has had a serious fling at the attempt under proper conditions he will give no thought to retiring, he says.

Ray sets 4 minutes and 10 seconds as within his striding powers for the mile distance. The fastest mile run by man of which there is any record stands to the credit of Norman S. Taber, a student of Brown University, 4 minutes 12.3 seconds. Ray is confident that he can better that time. Coaches of college and club track teams, familiar with the little taxi-driver's running ability, agree

Chicago, Feb. 23.—A current era of "increased congressional demagoguery in utterance, flaunting of radical doctrines, pardoning of convicted traitors and treating of lawless action by the widely power of certain labor leaders," was Mr. Averette Citizen's panoramic as pictured by Charles G. Dawes, former director of the national budget, in an address before the Union League club last night.

Mentioning no names, save a tribute to "our great, strong and determined President Harding," Mr. Dawes said:

"The average American citizen has witnessed the pardoning of men convicted of treason against their government in time of war, done with the apparent purpose of carrying political favor with the disreputable elements of our population."

The Brown student broke all records running on the track at the Harvard Stadium in 1916 against picked opponents who acted as his pacemakers. Such an arrangement is regarded as necessary to bring a better performance from Ray, and Ray indicates that he would welcome an invitation to make such an attempt sometime during the coming summer. The Harvard Stadium, however, probably will not be available for the test, unless some set of games not now scheduled is arranged.

Ray has set himself, as secondary objects, the breaking of the American indoor records for the two mile run, 9 minutes 11.2 seconds, and for the 3000 meter run, 8 minutes, 31.2 seconds, (both of which he holds himself) and that of 8 minutes 10.3 seconds for the 1.34 miles, held by the old-timer George V. Bonhag.

In his campaigning this season he has shown himself at top speed, breaking the record for the mile and one-third at New York recently, and three days later jumping over to Boston and racing away with the Hunter Mile again in a new record for that event, 4 minutes 19 seconds. He holds the indoor record for the mile of 4 minutes 14.3 seconds, made four years ago, but says he is running better now than ever before.

Ray attributes much of his success to his ability to judge his pace. A year ago, he declared, before he went to the starting line in the Hunter Mile, that he would run it in 4 minutes, 20 seconds. He set a new record in 4 minutes, 20.2 seconds. This year he said in advance that he would run it in 4 minutes 19 seconds. He won in 4 minutes 19 seconds, a furlong ahead of the field. Opponents do not worry him, the confident little racer says, because he is thus able to set his own standards, and his legs sustain the task assigned them.

Joie became a runner while he was training to be a boxer, and still aspires to gaining ring greatness some day.

"In Congress," he has witnessed in the last few years more demagoguery in utterance than ever before has characterized it.

"He has witnessed a newly elected senator rush into the senate debates with radical, inflammatory and untrue statements.

"He was shocked by the human beastly at Harrison, Ark.

"We have seen tremendous power wielded by certain labor leaders who understand mob psychology and the influence of radicals who lead masses of people to lawless action."

Mr. Averette Citizen in demanding a new bill of rights, Mr. Dawes declared, "because the power of organized minorities has become as dangerous to the liberty of the individuals as ever was the power of a prince."

"He who reasons that a halt to weakness in law enforcement and demagoguery is not about to be called and that conditions will become worse, little understands the American people. Some progress has been made—namely from the Adamson law to the Daugherty injunction, which in my judgment, future generations will regard as the beginning of a new era of law and order. Through it our government announces the right of a man to work is as sacred as the right of a man to stop work."

IN A TRANCE

An extraordinary case comes over the telegraph wire from Phoenix, Ariz. Two doctors and a coroner pronounce George W. Stevenson dead. But Stevenson's family and friends refuse to permit burial. They believe he is alive—in the peculiar state of suspended animation known as catalepsy.

So rests the Stevenson case, as this is written. Remarkable case, you comment? Yet Hudson, celebrated psychic investigator, learned that there is at least one such case of suspended animation each week in the United States.

Washington Irving Bishop, famous mind-reader, on several occasions went into a cataleptic state and dumfounded physicians by coming out of his trance after they had pronounced him dead. There is reason to believe that an autopsy finally was performed on him during one of his trances.

Hudson, writing 31 years ago, recorded this case:

"A lady now at the head of one of the larger orphan asylums in a western city has been twice pronounced dead by attending physicians, twice prepared for the grave, and twice resuscitated by her friends. On the last occasion, extraordinary precautions were taken, in view of her former experience. Vigorous treatment restored her to consciousness.

"Upon being restored, the lady declared that she had never for a moment lost consciousness, that she knew all that went on around her, perfectly comprehended the significance of all the tests which were applied, but felt the utmost indifference as to the result, and was neither surprised nor alarmed when it was decided that she was dead."

According to this, death may not be as unpleasant an experience as most of us fear.

Catalepsy has always been the greatest of medical mysteries. In the old days, many cataleptics probably were buried alive. That fate is an extremely remote possibility now, for science has made great strides in death tests.

This peculiar condition of suspended animation, in which even the heart apparently ceases to function, is extremely rare. It may follow a long period of illness or nervous exhaustion, as a complete rest and recuperation for the exhausted body.

Again, catalepsy is a hypnotic phenomenon, and it may be brought about by hypnotism. It is a weird subject, and our purpose in discussing it is to emphasize the dangers that may overtake amateur dabblers in hypnotism. The warning is timely, for a wave of hypnotism apparently is getting under way, as the logical successor of interest in autosuggestion—self-hypnotism.

DEATH

Only 88 Americans and Canadians died last year, out of every 10,000 of the total population. It was the lowest death rate of any year on record except 1921. The figures are furnished by Louis I. Dublin, statistics-expert of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Had it not been for an outbreak of flu, the death rate in 1922 would have been lower than the year before. Rockefeller's scientists, fortunately, have made the first real step toward the conquest of flu, by isolating the germ. If this leads to a preventive, as it probably will, a still lower death rates lies ahead.

The low death rate is good news. Even the people who wall most about the miseries of life do not seem anxious to leave.

FAME

The king of Italy announces that his daughter, Princess Yolanda, will be married in May. This gets only a few lines in most newspapers. You recall the many columns of type devoted to the engagement of Charles Chaplin and Pola Negri. It occurs to you that royalty is steadily losing its importance, as far as the public is concerned. Offer the average American the choice of a throne in Europe on one hand and the job of Chaplin or Negri on the other, and the throne would go begging.

The kings and queens of the twentieth century are movie stars, baseball players and multi-millionaires. A few centuries ago a throne was the pinnacle of popular ambition. Now we are ruled by money and applause.

WINE

Fifty thousand bottles of Chinese wine, seized in New York City by prohibition raiders, are taken out to sea and sunk. The sad sea waves must have a joyful moment.

This Chinese wine, known as Ng Ka Pi or yellow bark brandy, is distilled from wormwood. It is a first cousin of absinthe, and about four times as powerful as the strongest whisky.

Cellar chemists long since discovered that almost anything in the vegetable kingdom can be converted into alcohol, but wormwood is a new one to most of them. The ease with which alcohol can be filched from bounteous nature is the most difficult of the many prohibition problems.

UNCANNY

Radio engineers will broadcast Niagara Falls, so that "bugs" all over the country will hear the roar of the falling water. To furnish contrast, other scientists expect to enable us to hear, by wireless, the chirping of a cricket far off in the Philippine Islands.

This suggests that in the next war the people at home can tune in and hear the battles. That will make harder work for the recruiting officers. As far as sound is concerned (and, later, sight) radio is entirely eliminating distance on earth. Which brings us close to the threshold of the supernatural.

FEDERAL MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

Senator Capper is proposing to amend the Constitution and pass a Federal marriage and divorce act. Apparently not content with the spectacle of the Federal courts buried under a mountain of police-court cases by reason of the Volstead act, the senator would like to turn them also into divorce courts.

But even if the proposal were not extremely impracticable, it should be beaten because it violates the soundest principles of our government, that nothing should be centralized in Washington which can safely be left to the states. For if there is one subject more than any other on which the local opinion of the states should be final it is on the law of marriage and divorce. If there is one subject on which a central government should not meddle it is the one which Senator Capper has selected.

Legislation of this sort is always backed by people who are so enormously impressed by some comparatively minor evil that they at once demand a standardized, arbitrary, short-cut remedy. If they think they can cure one defect, say marriages by boys and girls who are too young to marry, they are willing to sacrifice the most essential privileges of local government, to congest the courts, to centralize still further, to distract Congress still more and to force every part of the country to conform to a law which one state may think too lax and another too rigid.

If Senator Capper would only consider the amount of centralization and bureaucracy which cannot be escaped because of economic necessity he would not be so anxious to complicate the Federal system by unnecessary Federal meddling. —New York World.

BIG GIVING

The report of President Henry S. Pritchett of the Carnegie Corporation, of the $58,000,000 which the body has distributed since its organization, raises two vital questions—one the aim of education and the other the difficulties of administering large philanthropic funds so as to bring about the good intended by their founders. As to the latter, Dr. Pritchett remarks: "Samaritely must be shed blood with gift money if its effect is not to do more harm than good."

That raises the question of the purpose of education. Thirty years ago boys used to be urged to go to college not to earn a better living but to make of themselves wiser, better and happier men. The overemphasis upon college training, of which Dr. Pritchett complains is not based upon any such ideal. It is based chiefly upon the belief that a boy will improve his chances, financially and socially, by going to college. It is probably true that this idea has drawn many students whose natural abilities pointed toward work not helped by college training. The disappointment at not being able to succeed in fields for which they have aimed is also great. There remains the further question whether that disappointment is greater than the good which comes from the broader outlook on life which the college gives. Economically the waste is clear, but the spiritual loss is by no means so certain.

That raises the question whether the uses of education are chiefly spiritual or economic. Dr. Pritchett, like most modern educators, is on the side of economic values. There is frequent complaint of the need of spiritual forces in our life today which are seldom to be found. Perhaps this economic ideal of college training is in part at least responsible. —Brooklyn Eagle.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD STUFF

A bill has been introduced into the lower house of the Oregon legislature providing for a mental examination of all persons aspiring toward licenses as pilots on the sea of matrimony. All who obtain them must satisfy the authorities that their intellectual batting average is not below that of the child of 12.

This bill is undoubtedly motivated by the most commendable of ambitions, and the Oregonian renaissance of the superman idea is just at present powerful enough to invest such a measure with the dignity of a statute. So it is worthy of serious consideration. But some pragmatists will have a doubt or two as to its efficacy. For example, what man, at the end of that mad ecstasy we call courtship, could pass any mental test whatever? Some of those who apply for marriage licenses, we have been told, forget even the name of their intended, to say nothing of their own. Would they be rated as the mental age of 12? And what provision, it may be asked, has been made for the great army of flappers, both male and female, who would, under the enforcement of this statute, clutter the population with their unmarriageability? They might be deported to make room for the age-of-twelves; but this would be inconvenient and expensive.

On the other hand, what reason have we to believe that, under this complex civilization of ours, a person who has passed a dozen mental summers has progressed far enough to be happy though married? A mere matter of happiness, would probably not worry the super-Oregonians. They have attuned their minds to higher things.

One might doubt in extent. But it is too easy to doubt. Perhaps, after all, most Oregonians have reached the sophisticated age

SAP'S BEGINNING TO RUN

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The next person that Nancy and Nick met in Criss-Cross City in Mix-Up Land was a soldier.

"Hello!" said Nick. "Hello!" said the soldier. "Where are you going?"

"We are going to see Jack Straw's palace, if you please. We'd like to see it."

"I don't please," growled the soldier. "It's a secret, so it is, and if you try to see it I'll have to shoot you."

"Then," sighed Nancy, "I suppose we'd better not try, had we?"

"Listen!" whispered the soldier. "Go ahead if you want to. If I shoot you it won't hurt. My bullets are only bread-pills, and my word is made of rubber. It can't cut you. It would only rub you out."

"We don't wish to be rubbed out either," said Nick. "We had a hard enough time getting here. Are you a private soldier or a corporal?"

"Neither," said the soldier. "I'm only a poor general, and I have to stand here all day like a crossing-sweeper to see that the pigeons don't run over the children."

"That's funny!" declared Nancy. "Pigeons aren't big enough to hurt children, besides they wouldn't hurt you."

"Oh, you don't know a thing!" declared the general. "Pigeons here in Mix-Up Land are wild and ferocious. It is the automobiles that are little and tame and gentle and eat out of the children's hands. Look out! There's a pigeon now. He nearly stepped on you."

"Say," said Nick. "If you know where Jack Straw lives why don't you tell us? We'd like to see him."

"All right, I'll tell you," said the general. "Only don't tell anybody. He lives in a house made of dominoes, and the door is the domino with the double five on it. There isn't any handle. All you do is to push."

"Oh, thank you," cried Nancy. "Thank you so much for telling. And where is the house? We can't go in until we find it."

"It moves around, so I forget," said the general. "But if I think of it, I'll send you word."

THE CHARM

(By Burton Braley)
There's lots of things I love aer for—her slenderness and grace, the joy that dances in her eyes, the beauty of her face.

The lips that are so soft to kiss, the voice I like to hear;

She has a myriad witcheries that make her sweet and dear, but more, I think, than any other charm of hers I prize,

The little laughing wrinkles in the corners of her eyes.

They won me from the very first, they'll hold me to the last. A happy, winsome magic, with a lure that binds me fast,

And by the gods of cheerfulness and gay, warm-hearted mirth, I'll strive to bring her happiness for all that I am worth;

I'll try to keep with all the skill a lover can devise, those little laughing wrinkles at the corners of her eyes!

Together we will laugh through life, and bravely as can be, we'll chuckle in the face of fate and grin at destiny.

Endeavoring to make the world perhaps a little bit more frolicsome and sunnier because we lived in it;

And all of our posterity will have, so I surmise, those little laughing wrinkles in the corners of their eyes!

SIR NORMAN GREYES, formerly of Scotland Yard, joins the chase of MICHAEL SAYERS, famous criminal. Sayers, masquerading as Thomas Pugsley, broker, is recognized by Greyes, who sends a police inspector to accost Sayers on the street. Sayers shoots the inspector and escapes. Michael turns to his home. Michael questions his maid, JANET SOALE. Later at the golf club he finds Greyes waiting for the kill.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY
Sir Norman Greyes' Side

I resigned my position at Scotland Yard for two reasons. First, as a protest against an act of gross injustice which, although it did not affect me personally, was still bitterly resented by the majority of my fellow-workers; and secondly because, through the unexpected death of a distant relative, I succeeded to a barenetty and a sufficient income.

I spent the best part of three years in travel, nearly half of which time I was in the United States. On my return to London I found myself, much against my will, hankering after my old profession. It was very clear to me that my old department had lost the mastery it had once had over the criminal world. The phenomena of several cold-blooded murders and various large and daring robberies remained entirely unsolved. In the intervals of my country life, began to study these from an outsider's point of view, chiefly from the columns of the newspapers, but also to some extent from hints and information supplied to me by my friend Inspector Rimmington, who had been one of my colleagues in the old days and now held the post which I had vacated. Gradually I came to a certain conclusion, a conclusion which I kept largely to myself because I felt sure that no one at the Yard was likely to agree with me. I decided, that the majority of these undetected crimes were due to one person, or rather to one gang of criminals presided over by a dominant leader. Purely from the developed instinct by my long years of service in the police department, I set myself the task of hunting down this super-criminal.

There were three crimes which I became convinced had been committed by the same hand. The first was the great robbery of jewels from Messrs. Hanson & Watts' establishment in Regent Street, and the murder of the watchman, who was shot dead at his post. No trace of even a single article of this jewelry had ever been discovered. The second crime was the robbery of a number of bonds from a messenger in a railway carriage on the London, Chatham and Dover line. The messenger was also shot, but recovered after six months' nursing, although he could never give any coherent account of what had happened to him. The bonds were disposed of in South America. The third was the robbery from Lord Wenderley's house in Park Lane.

There were other crimes which I thought might be connected with these; but these three, for various reasons, became linked together in my mind as the outcome of one man's planning. I set myself the task of discovering this one man, and the day came at last when I really believed that I was in a position to lay my hand upon him. There is no necessity to detail the evidence which pointed to this man. It is enough to say that, after watching him for three weeks, I became convinced that a man of the name of Thomas Pugsley, carrying on business in Bermondsey as a leather broker, and living apparently the most respectable of lives at Brixton, was in some manner connected with these crimes.

I discovered that Pugsley's leather-agency business was prosecuted without energy or attention, that his frequent absences from London were not in neighborhoods where his wares could be pushed, and that he was often away for a month at a time, with his whereabouts unknown even to his landlady. The latter was a highly respectable woman at whose house he had lived for the last two years and who, I honestly believe, was ignorant of her lodger's antecedents, habits and business. By taking rooms in the neighborhood, I easily discovered all that she knew and one or two circumstances which lent color to my suspicions. I placed these before Rimmington, and it was decided to make an arrest.

A more clumsy piece of business than this intended arrest was never planned or carried into effect. The inspector in charge of the affair by Rimmington, and his two subordinates, arrived at Brixton an hour later than the time fixed upon, accosted Pugsley in the street, and were very soon made aware of the class of person with whom they had to deal. Before the inspector could get out half a dozen words, he was lying on the pavement with a bullet through his shoulder. His companions dragged him to the pavement and set him up against the railings. Then they turned to look for Pugsley. There was not a trace of him to be discovered anywhere.

The amazing skill and cunning of the man was amply demonstrated at that morning. By some extraordinary means he seemed to disappear from the face of the earth.

The morning which witnessed, however, the starting of the inspector and the remarkable disappearance of the man in whom I was so deeply interested, was memorable, so far as I was concerned, for another noteworthy incident. Absolutely disgusted with the result of my six months' labors, I determined to wipe the whole thing from my memory, and traveled down to Woking with the intention of playing a round of golf. I was introduced by the secretary to a resident of the place whose name was James Stanfield, and we had a round which ranked among the best I ever played in my life.

Stanfield was a silent but by no means a gloomy person. He appeared to be about forty years of age and an absolute golf maniac. He played every shot with the most rigid accuracy, but I must confess with also the most wonderful precision. His drives were never long, but they were long enough for him to escape trouble, and in the approximate eighty shots which he took to complete the course, I cannot remember one that was in any way fluffed or foisted. He beat me at the seventeenth hole, and it was while we stood together upon the eighteenth tee that the incident happened which was to bring still more excitement into the day.

On our eighteenth was a small planting of shrubs, through which wound the path which my partner pointed out to me as leading to his house. Our attention was attracted by the continued barking of a small dog which had wandered off from the adjacent footpath. I had the curiosity to walk a step or two into the shrubbery to see what was the trouble. My companion, however, who was a little on my left, was the first to discover the cause of the dog's excitement. At a little cry from him I hurried to his side. Stretched across his back with extended arms, and a small blue hole in his forehead, we found the body of a man. He was dead but still warm, and by an extraordinary chance I at once recognized him. He was one of the two plainclothesmen whom I had seen in Woolerton Road six months ago, foiled in his attempt to arrest the man who had been passing under the name of Thomas Pugsley!

Jaffet Soale's Explanation
Just before midday on Thursday, the 13th of November, my master made one of his unexpected reappearances. I was not surprised. Only the night before, I had dreamed of him, and it seemed to me impossible that with my passionate prayers going out day by day, he should stay away so much longer. When I first saw him turn in at the gate, I was filled with excitement. If he could have seen me at that moment, he would have known and understood everything. By the time he had reached the front door, however, and let him in, I had regained my self-control. I must have seemed to him just the ordinary well-mannered, well-conducted parlormaid.

He changed his clothes and went off presently for his round of golf. When I went to his room to brush and press the clothes which he had taken off, I found, however, that he had placed them in a drawer and apparently locked it. The discovery, coming on top of many others, gave me food for thought. I resolved to watch the next morning's newspapers. It was becoming more and more clear to me that there was something in my master's manner of life which he was anxious to conceal from the world. Social and Personal

Annual Banquet of Musical Club Proves Success

The eighth annual banquet of the Thursday Musical club held last evening at the McKenzee hotel was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. At 7.30 sixty guests assembled about the long table which was artistically and appropriately decorated. Before sitting down, they sang one stanza of America, while flags waved. Large candles, which burned seven red candles, were placed at intervals with single candle sticks interspersed. Several cuttings from George Washington's cherry tree into each of which was thrust a small hatchet, were a unique feature of the decorations. Deep red carnations and sprays of myrtle formed a line throughout the length of the table. Mrs. H. O. Wray and Mrs. E. H. L. Vesperman composed the committee in charge of arrangements for the banquet.

An elaborate and delicious four course dinner was served. Miss Elizabeth Ann Jones was toastmistress. In addition to being versatile in discourse upon a variety of subjects she called for the toasts and introduced the speakers in an eloquent manner.

The first number on the program was a ladies' quartette, "Winken Blinks and Nod."—Nevin.

Mmes. Bauer, Scheffer, Scotchorn, Morris, obligato Mrs. Graham, accompanied on the piano by Mmes. Rose and Doerr.

After this selection J. A. Graham responded with a toast on Patriotism. The next numbers included the following:

FROM A WORKING GIRL

Editor Tribune:

In your issue of February 22nd appears an article signed "An Employer" who refers to the appeal which was made by the single working girls of Bismarck and Mandan to the Legislative Assembly that married women be prohibited from working in public offices and that he could not understand what was meant by the married women holding the upper hand.

Many of us single girls do not hold the upper hand and we are willing to work on trial and for much less salary than many of the married women are drawing if we could only have the chance but what is a poor girl going to do when she is side tracked for some body's wife who has a political pull?

We lost Senate Bill No. 390 and our only hopes are to submit our claim to the people at the next election an initiate a law.

THE ELTINGE

Have you read Peter B. Kyne's story "Humanizing Mr. Wainwright"? If you haven't you can get acquainted with the tale in a most pleasing form in Jack Holt's Paramount picture "Making a Man" which shows at the Eltinge today and tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. From every angle it is undoubtedly one of the outstanding pictures of the month. It is a big story by a big author, and produced in a big way by Joseph Henabery. The supporting cast is excellent, and includes Eva Novak and J. P. Lockney. Also Pathe News and an Acrop Fable comedy, "Henry's Busted Romance."

CAPITOL THEATRE

"One Week of Love," which comes to the Capitol theater on Monday will be a rare treat for all, but most of a treat to those who have been writing, begging and cajoling the Selznick Pictures Corporation to play Conway Tearle and Elaine Hammerstein together in one picture. Ever since these two popular players achieved fame and fortune in "The World of Cinema" Mr. Lewis Selznick has been searching for a story in which he might employ their combined talents. At last ten thousand manuscripts passed through his hands before he finally picked Edward J. Montague's "One Week of Love" as the final choice. Mr. Selznick's choice will cause thousands of hearts to flutter with excitement from Portland, Maine, to the other Portland that fronts the Pacific.

Here is the story that employs a kick in every foot, rising steadily to the champion climax of the last ten years. It is a glorious battle between a "Sheik of the Sierras" and a Society Queen, the Crude vs. the Effete, and in the end both are winners. You will like the "Sheik of the Sierras" more than any Sheik you ever saw; for he is a white man through and through, who speaks with teeth and not with rolling eyes. Who but Conway Tearle for this part? What other actor in the world could bring the necessary brain and brawn to this human role? As the Society Queen who flies as high over the Western mountains as she does the effete drawing-rooms, Elaine Hammerstein is unquestionably at her charming best. A girl who was as much at home guiding an aeroplane as guiding a social career was necessary for the role, an actress who combined red and blue blood, who could dance the latest steps at social functions, and climb with those same dainty feet the most difficult mountain passes. And Mr. Selznick chose, of course, "The Star Without a Failure," Elaine Hammerstein.

Conway Tearle and Elaine Hammerstein probably provide of the most sensational combinations yet provided in pictures.

Re-elect Officers at Meeting of Humane Society

The eleventh annual meeting of the North Dakota Humane and Society for the Friendless occurred on Tuesday of this week, in Bismarck. A banquet was held in the Grand Pacific after which reports for the year were given first separately by each member of the staff and then in totals by the superintendent. Very favorable comment was offered by the officers at the volume of work performed upon considering the amount of money at disposal for carrying on such work. Two hundred and five places were

Would Shut Down Gas Works

"My stomach has been so filled with gas for the last three years that I felt I could pretty nearly supply our town. I also had frequent pains in right side in region of the appendix. Doctors didn't help much. One day my neighbor told me about what Mayr's Wonderful Remedy had done for him and I got a bottle of our druggist. I can say that it will do all more than you claim for it." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. visited during the year and 154 families investigated involving some 400 children, 75 of whom were removed and permanently cared for. About 50 cases of cruelty were investigated and much other service performed.

For several years the Society had under advisement plans for suitable shelter for the children exposed for and this matter was gone over thoroughly and the committee of care of children was continued. The Board of Directors also decided on having the offices of the Society removed to more commodious quarters in town and take on additional office help.

It was also considered advisable to organize local societies in communities over the state and do more publicity work.

All officers and members of the Board were re-elected. J. P. Jackson, continues as president as does Theo. Koffel as vice-president and J. L. Bell, treasurer. Geo. B. Newcomb is superintendent; A. Guenther is superintendent to Foreign Speaking people and J. C. Wilson, Jamestown, is district superintendent.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Polishing The Floor

Those very dark marks made on a hardwood floor by rockers or furniture casters will disappear if you rub them with very fine steel wool dipped in soapy water.

Cleaning Cake Pans

To clean the corners of your square cake pans you will find a small brush, such as you use for vegetables, useful.

Heat The Knife

When cutting fresh bread, if you will heat the knife first, you will be able to make your way through the loaf with less difficulty.

Use Boiling Water

With most vegetables it is a mistake to start them in cold water, as they lose their flavor. Put them into water that is already boiling.

To Avoid Rust Stains

If you will paint your bed springs a white or very light shade you will not be distressed by rust stains on your mattress.

For Drying Lettuce

Keep a supply of paper towels in your kitchen. You will find them excellent for drying lettuce.

DRESSES • SUITS • COATS • WRAPS

THIS is the showing for which the smart younger set waits every year—the showing which establishes the style vogue for the season and brings the newest, most exclusive creations of New York and Paris to the women of our city. This year the collection comprises an exceptional variety of charming modes, brilliant in conception, exquisite in execution.

We deem it a privilege to be the one store chosen in this community to present these styles from the The House of Youth, foremost specialists in youthful fashions, as well as many others from creators of accepted standing.

The Models Sketched Above and Described Below are Typical of the Entire Stock

"GREEN"

Working could be more exactly expressive of youthful grace than this wrap of soft velveteen, its deep yoke crossed by three widely separated ruffles, each accented by motif embroidered in harmonizing silks and metallic threads, and falling into graceful drapes ending with a tassel. A buck's studded with brilliant buttons the high tucked collar. The lining is of brilliant crepe.

"WATTEAU"

A marked hint at dainty picturesqueness is this model in flat crepe, with its full skirt flared on one side and draped to a point on the other. Of flat navy or gray, it is adorned at the elbow with a band and loops of contrasting velvet ribbon in two tones, the faded gliding being twisted with the same vivid ribbon which hangs in long ends from a knot at the right hip.

"ZARA"

For the girl who must be very individual is shown this fascinating three-piece suit of twill, fastening again the modish close lip line, but with the broad belt extending only as a panel across each side of the jacket. The recent, cuffs and belt are of harmonizing devoren to which are applied straps and diamonds of twill and fine stripes of contrasting pastiche, while the crepe under tunic of neutral tint is given in oriental draping.

Annual Banquet of Musical Club Proves Success

The Eight annual banquet of the Thursday Musical club held last evening at the McKenzie hotel was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. At 7.30 sixty guests assembled about the long table which was artistically and appropriately decorated. Before sitting down, they sang one stanza of America while flags waved. Large chandeliers from which burned seven red candles were placed at intervals with single candle sticks interspersed. Several cutlins from George Washington's cherry tree into each of which was thrust a small hatchet, were a unique feature of the decorations. Deep red carnations and series of myrtle formed a line throughout the length of the table.

Mrs. H. O. Wray and Mrs. E. H. L. Vesperman composed the committee in charge of arrangements for the banquet.

An elaborate and delicious four course dinner was served. Miss Elizabeth Ann Jones was toastmistress. In addition to being versatile in discourse upon a variety of subjects she called for the toasts and introduced the speakers in an eloquent manner.

The first number on the program was a ladies' quartet, "Winkles Blink and Nod," by Mrs. Mmes. Bauer, Schaeffer, Seothorn, Morris, obligato Mrs. Graham, accompanied on the piano by Mmes. Rose and Doerr.

After this selection J. A. Graham responded with a toast on Patriotism. The next numbers included the following:

Vocal Solo—"Where 'ere Thou Art"—"Just a Wondering"—Channing—Mrs. Wingreene accompanied by Mrs. Bauer.

Piano solo—"Weiner Bon Bon"—Strauss-King. b. "Impromptu"—"Rive King". Mrs. Rose Toast—"Fair Sleeper", a toast in rhyme to each member of the club by Mrs. J. A. Larson.

Vocal duet—"Every Power"—Madam Butterfly—Puccini. Mrs. Targart and Mrs. Bauer. Vocal solo—"On the Road to Mandalay"—Speaks, George Humphreys.

Toast to Music—Herman Schaeffer. Double Quartet—"I Hear a Thush at Eve"—Cadman. "Forget-me-not"—Giese.

Mmes. Arnot, French, Morris, Seothorn, Taylor, Vesperman, Wingreene, Targart, and Miss Jones.

Out of town guests at the banquet were Mrs. Darwin of Dawson and Mrs. Frank McGray of Garrison.

Styles are simple, with a slight tendency toward higher waists—nearly back to normal—and straight chemise frocks.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

IN A TRANCE

An extraordinary case comes over the telegraph wire from Phoenix, Ariz. Two doctors and a coroner pronounce George W. Stevenson dead. But Stevenson's family and friends refuse to permit burial. They believe he is alive in the peculiar state of suspended animation known as catalepsy.

So rests the Stevenson case, as this is written. Remarkable case, you comment? Yet Hudson, celebrated psychic investigator, learned that there is at least one such case of suspended animation each week in the United States.

Washington Irving Bishop, famous mind-reader, on several occasions went into a cataleptic state and dumfounded physicians by coming out of his trance after they had pronounced him dead. There is reason to believe that an autopsy finally was performed on him during one of his trances. Hudson, writing 31 years ago, recorded this case:

"A lady now at the head of one of the larger orphan asylums in a western city has been twice pronounced dead by attending physicians, twice prepared for the grave, and twice resuscitated by her friends. On the last occasion, extraordinary precautions were taken, in view of her former experience. Vigorous treatment restored her to consciousness.

"Upon being restored, the lady declared that she had never for a moment lost consciousness, that she knew all that went on around her, perfectly comprehended the significance of all the tests which were applied, but felt the utmost indifference as to the result, and was neither surprised nor alarmed when it was decided that she was dead."

According to this, death may not be as unpleasant an experience as most of us fear.

Catalepsy has always been the greatest of medical mysteries. In the old days, many cataleptics probably were buried alive. That fate is an extremely remote possibility now, for science has made great strides in death tests.

This peculiar condition of suspended animation, in which even the heart apparently ceases to function, is extremely rare. It may follow a long period of illness or nervous exhaustion, as a complete rest and recuperation for the exhausted body.

Again, catalepsy is a hypnotic phenomenon, and it may be brought about by hypnosis. It is a weird subject, and our purpose in discussing it is to emphasize the dangers that may overtake amateur dabblers in hypnosis. The warning is timely, for a wave of hypnosis apparently is getting under way, as the logical successor of interest in auto-suggestion—self-hypnotism.

DEATH

Only 88 Americans and Canadians died last year, out of every 10,000 of the total population. It was the lowest death rate of any year on record except 1921. The figures are furnished by Louis I. Dublin, statistics-expert of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Had it not been for an outbreak of flu, the death rate in 1922 would have been lower than the year before. Rockefeller's scientists, fortunately, have made the first real step toward the conquest of flu, by isolating the germ. If this leads to a preventive, as it probably will, a still lower death rates lies ahead.

The low death rate is good news. Even the people who wail most about the miseries of life do not seem anxious to leave.

FAME

The king of Italy announces that his daughter, Princess Yolanda, will be married in May. This gets only a few lines in most newspapers. You recall the many columns of type devoted to the engagement of Charles Chaplin and Pola Negri. It occurs to you that royalty is steadily losing its importance, as far as the public is concerned. Offer the average American the choice of a throne in Europe on one hand and the job of Chaplin or Negri on the other, and the throne would go begging.

The kings and queens of the twentieth century are movie stars, baseball players and multi-millionaires. A few centuries ago a throne was the pinnacle of popular ambition. Now we are ruled by money and applause.

WINE

Fifty thousand bottles of Chinese wine, seized in New York City by prohibition raiders, are taken out to sea and sunk. The sad sea waves must have a joyful moment.

This Chinese wine, known as Ng Ka Pi or yellow bark brandy, is distilled from wormwood. It is a first cousin of absinthe, and about four times as powerful as the strongest whisky.

Cellar chemists long since discovered that almost anything in the vegetable kingdom can be converted into alcohol. But wormwood is a new one to most of them. The ease with which alcohol can be fished from bounteous nature is the most difficult of the many prohibition problems.

UNCANNY

Radio engineers will broadcast Niagara Falls, so that "bugs" all over the country will hear the roar of the falling waters. To furnish contrast, other scientists expect to enable us to hear, by wireless, the chirping of a cricket far off in the Philippine Islands.

This suggests that in the next war the people at home can tune in and hear the battles. That will make harder work for the recruiting officers. As far as sound is concerned (and, later, sight) radio is entirely eliminating distance on earth. Which brings us close to the threshold of the supernatural.

FEDERAL MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

Senator Capper is proposing to amend the Constitution and pass a Federal marriage and divorce act. Apparently not content with the spectacle of the Federal court buried under a mountain of police-court cases by reason of the Volstead act, the senator would like to turn them also into divorce courts.

But even if the proposal were not extremely impracticable, it should be better because it violates the soundest principles of our government, that nothing should be centralized in Washington which can safely be left to the states. For if there is one subject more than any other on which the local opinion of the states should be final it is on the law of marriage and divorce. If there is one subject on which a central government should not meddle it is the one which Senator Capper has selected.

Legislation of this sort is always backed by people who are so enormously impressed by some comparatively minor evil that they at once demand a standardized, arbitrary, short-cut remedy. If they think they can cure one defect, say marriages by boys and girls who are too young to marry, they are willing to sacrifice the most essential privileges of local government, to congest the courts, to centralize still further, to distract congress still more, and to force every part of the country to conform to a law which one state may think too lax and another too strict.

If Senator Capper would only consider the amount of centralization and bureaucracy which cannot be escaped because of economic necessity he would not be so anxious to complicate the Federal system by unnecessary Federal meddling. —New York World.

BIG GIVING

The report of President Henry S. Pritchett of the Carnegie Corporation, of the $38,000,000 which the body has distributed since its organization, raises two vital questions:—the aim of education and the other the difficulties of administering large philanthropic funds so as to bring about the good intended by their founders. As to the latter Dr. Pritchett remarks: "Somebody must sweat blood with gift money if its effect is not to do more harm than good."

That raises the question whether the use of education is chiefly spiritual or economic. Dr. Pritchett, like most modern educators, is on the side of economic values. There is frequent complaint of the need of spiritual forces in our life today which are seldom to be found. Perhaps this economic ideal of college training is in part at least responsible. —Brooklyn Eagle.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD STIFF

A bill has been introduced into the lower house of the Oregon legislature providing for a mental examination of all persons applying for and licenses as pilots on the sea of matrimony. All who obtain them must satisfy the authorities that their intellectual bating average is not below that of the child of 12.

This bill is undoubtedly motivated by the most commendable of ambitions, and the Oregonian is justified in the superlative idea is just at present powerful enough to invest such a measure with the dignity of a statute. So it is worthy of serious consideration.

But some pragmatists will have a doubt or two as to its efficacy. For example, what man, at the end of that mad ecstasy we call courtship, could pass any mental examination? Some of those who apply for marriage licenses, we have been told, forget even the name of their intended, to say nothing of their own. Would they be rated as the mental age of 12?

And what provision, it may be asked, has been made for the great army of flappers, both male and female, who would, under the enforcement of this statute, clutter the population with their unmarriageability? They might be deported to make room for the age-of-twelves; but this would be inconvenient and expensive.

On the other hand, what reason have we to believe that, under this complex civilization, a cure, person who has passed a dozen mental summers has progressed far enough to be happy though married? A mere matter of happiness, would probably not worry the super-Oregonians. They have attuned their minds to higher things.

One might doubt in extent. But it is too easy to doubt. Perhaps after all, most Oregonians have reached the sophisticated age of 12. Such a measure as this would indicate it. But not much more. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The next person that Nancy and Nick met in Cress-Cross City in Mix-Up Land was a soldier.

"Hello!" said Nick. "Hello!" said the soldier. "Where are you going?"

"We are going to see Jack Straw's palace, if you please. We'd like to see it."

"I don't please," growled the soldier. "It's a secret, so it is, and if you try to see it I'll have to shoot you."

"Then," sighed Nancy, "I suppose we'd better not try, had we?"

"Listen!" whispered the soldier. "Go ahead if you want to. I'll shoot you if you want to. My bullet is made of rubber. It can't cut you. It would only rub you out."

"We don't wish to be rubbed out either," said Nick. "We had a hard enough time getting here. Are you a private soldier or a corporal?"

"Neither," said the soldier. "I'm only a poor general, and I have to stand here all day like a crossing-sweeper to see that the pigeon don't run over the children."

"That's funny," declared Nancy. "Pigeons aren't big enough to hunt children, besides they wouldn't run away."

"Oh, you don't know a thing!" declared the broad bill general crossly. "Pigeons here in Mix-Up Land are wild and ferocious. It is the automobiles that are little and tame, and gentle and eat out of the children's hands. Look out! There's a pigeon now. He nearly stepped on you."

"Say," said Nick, "if you know where Jack Straw lives, why don't you tell us? We'd like to see him."

"All right, I'll tell you," said the general. "Only don't tell anybody. He lives in a house made of dominoes, and the door is the dominion with the double five on it. There isn't any handle. All you do is to push."

"Oh, thank you," cried Nancy. "Thank you so much for telling me. And where is the house? We can't go in until we find it."

"It moves around, so I forget," said the general. "But if I think of it, I'll end you word."

THE CHARM

(By Burton Brainer)

There's lots of things I love her for her tenderness and grace.

The joy that dances in her eyes, the beauty of her face,

The lips that are so soft to kiss, the voice I like to hear;

She has a myriad witcheries that make her sweet and dear,

But more, I think, than any other charm of hers I prize,

The little laugh line wrinkles in the corners of her eyes.

They won't come from the very first, they'll hold me to the last,

A happy, winsome magic, with a lure that binds me fast,

And by the gods of cheerfulness and gay, warm-hearted mirth,

I'll strive to bring her happiness for all that I am worth;

I'll try to keep with all the skill a lover can devise,

Those little laughing wrinkles at the corners of her eyes!

BEGIN HERE—TODAY

SIR NORMAN GREYES, formerly of Scotland Yard, joins the chase of MICHAEL SAYERS, famous criminal, disguised as a detective.

Now go on with story. Sir Norman Greyes, former of Scotland Yard for two reasons, first as a protest against an act of gross injustice which, although it did not affect me personally, was still bitterly resented by the majority of my fellow-workers, and secondly because, through the unexpected death of a distant relative, I succeeded to a barency and a sufficient income.

I spent the best part of three years in travel, nearly half of which time I was in the United States. On my return to London I found myself, much against my will, banking after my old profession. It was very clear to me that my old department had lost the mastery it had once had over the criminal world. The problems of several cold-blooded murders and various large and daring robberies remained entirely unsolved.

There were three crimes which I became convinced had been committed by the same hand. The first was the great robbery of jewels from Messrs. Hanson & Watts' establishment in Regent Street, and the murder of the watchman, who was shot dead at his post. No trace of even a single article of this jewelry had ever been discovered. The second crime was the robbery of a number of bonds from a messenger in a railway carriage on the London, Chatham and Dover line. The messenger was also shot, but recovered after six months' nursing, although he could never give any coherent account of what had happened to him. The bonds were disposed of in South America. The third was the robbery from Lord Wenderley's house in Park Lane.

There were other crimes which I thought might be connected with these; but these three, for serious reasons, became linked together in my mind as the outcome of one man's planning. I set myself the task of discovering this one man, and the day came at last when I really believed that I was in a position to lay my hand upon him.

There is no necessity to detail the evidence which pointed this man. It is enough to say that after watching him for three weeks, I became convinced that a man of the name of Thomas Pugsley, carrying on business in Bermondsey as a leather broker, and living apparently the most respectable of lives at Brixton, was in some way connected with these crimes.

I discovered that Pugsley's leather-broking business was prosecuted without energy or attention, that his frequent absences from London were not in neighborhood, where his ware could be packed, and that he was often away for a month at a time, with his whereabouts unknown even to his landlady. The latter was a highly respectable woman at whose house he had lived for the last two years and who, I honestly believe, was ignorant of her lodger's antecedents, habits and business. By taking rooms in the neighborhood, I easily discovered all that she knew and one or two circumstances which lent color to my suspicions. I placed these before Rimmington, and it was decided to make an arrest.

A more clumsy piece of business than this intended arrest was never planned or carried into effect. The inspector placed in charge of the affair by Rimmington, and his two subordinates, arrived at Brixton an hour later than the time fixed upon, accepted Pugsley in the street, and were very soon in the custody of the police.

With whom they had to deal. Before the inspector could get out half a dozen words, he was lying on the pavement with a bullet through his shoulder. His companions dragged him to the pavement and set him up against the wall. Then they turned to look for Pugsley. There was not a trace of him to be discovered anywhere.

The amazing skill and cunning of the man was amply demonstrated on that morning. By some extraordinary means he seemed to disappear from the face of the earth.

The morning which witnessed, however, the shooting of the inspector and the remarkable disappearance of the man in whom I was so deeply interested, was memorable, so far as I was concerned, for another noteworthy incident. Absolutely disgusted with the result of my six months' labors, I determined to wipe the whole thing from my memory, and traveled down to Woking with the intention of playing a round of golf. I was introduced by the secretary to a resident of the place whose name I never forgot. Stanfield, and we had a round which ranks amongst the best I ever played in my life.

Stanfield was a silent but by no means a gloomy person. He appeared to be about forty years of age and an absolute golf maniac. He played every shot with the most judicious care, but I must confess with also the most wonderful precision. His drives were never long, but they were long enough for him to escape trouble, and in the approximate eighty shots which he took to complete the course, I cannot remember one that was in any way fuffed or foaled. He beat me at the seventh hole, and it was while we stood together upon the eighteenth tee that the incident happened which was to bring still more excitement into the day.

On our right was a small planting of shrubs, through which wound the path which my partner pointed out to me as leading to his house. Our attention was attracted by the continued barking of a small dog which had wandered from the adjacent footpath. I had the curiosity to walk a step or two into the shrubbery to see what was the trouble. My companion, however, who was a little on my left, was the first to discover the cause of the dog's excitement. At a little cry from him I hurried to his side. Stretched upon his back, with extended arms, and a small blue hole in his forehead, we found the body of a man. He was dead, but still warm, and by extraordinary chance I at once recognized him. He was one of the plain-clothes policemen whom I had seen in Woolerton Road that morning, foiled in his attempt to arrest the man who had been passing under the name of Thomas Pugsley!

Just before midday on Thursday, the third of November, my master made one of his unexpected reappearances. I was not surprised. Only the night before, I had dreamed of him, and it seemed to me impossible that with my persistent prayers going out day by day, he should stay away much longer. When I first saw him turn in at the gate, I was filled with excitement. If he could have seen me at that moment, he would have known and understood everything. By the time he had reached the front door, however, and I let him in, he had regained his self-control. I must have seemed to him just the ordinary well-mannered, well-conducted parlormaid.

He changed his clothes and went off presently for his round of golf. When I went to his room to brush and press the clothes which he had taken off, I found, however, that he had placed them in a drawer and apparently locked it. The discovery, coming on top of many others, gave me food for thought. I resolved to watch the next morning's newspapers. It was becoming more and more clear to me that there was something in my master's manner of life which he was anxious to conceal from the world. I was the more convinced of this when I saw that in the top drawer which he had opened to take

A section hand on a railroad had to make a report to the claims department on a cow that had been killed by a train.

He filled out the form provided in such cases with no difficulty until he came to the last line, which read:

"Disposition of carcass."

He puzzled over this for a moment. Then his face lighted up, and he wrote:

"Kind and gentle."

'DEMONS' WILL FACE BATTLE WITH MANDAN

Hardest Test of Season Expected at Game Here Tonight

The biggest home game of the season will be played in the high school gym tonight when the "demons" meet their ancient rivals from Mandan.

The Mandan team already has a victory on their own floor over the local quintet, but the "demons" are out to even up the score.

For the last two weeks, Bismarck high's team has been handicapped by the injury of Alfson, star center, but he is back in the game again, and Coach Houser planned to use him. Coach Houser probably will start Burke and Halloran at forwards, Love at center and Nelson and Williams as guards.

Saturday night the Bismarck team will play a return game in Dickinson.

There will be a benefit dance at Patterson hall after the Mandan game tonight.

No-Hit Hero Is Given Paltry Raise By Sox

By NEA Service

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Now it is easy to understand why South paw Dickey Kerr refused to sign with the Chicago White Sox last season.

Kerr had a salary grievance. In 1919 Kerr kept the world series by his fine pitching. His loyalty, however, was evidently soon forgotten.

Kerr played with some intelligible last year. Now that he seeks reinstatement, he stands suspended for a year for signing.

The case of Pitcher Charley Robertson brings the spotlight back to Kerr.

In the spring of last season Robertson pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Detroit, in which not a single Tiger player reached first base.

It was one of the greatest pitching feats in the history of the sport.

Robertson became a hero overnight. The fame of that remarkable game made him the gate attraction of the Sox. It would be conservative to say that Robertson's no-hit game was worth at least $15,000 to the Chicago club. Fans all over the circuit wanted to see the youngster.

Robertson has just returned his 1923 contract unsigned. It calls for a $15 a month raise, about $100 for the season. Robertson asks $1000 increase. He deserves it.

Yankees Sign Young Pitcher By Name Johnson

By NEA Service

Washington, Feb. 23.—The American League insists on fortifying itself against the time when Walter Johnson will pass out of the majors.

For years the name of Walter Johnson has been a big attraction in the Johnsonian organization. Cobb, Johnson and Ruth have been great turnstile clickers.

Recently the wires carried the story that Johnson had returned his signed contract to the Washington club. Next year will make his seventeenth season in the American League.

Johnson, by the way, holds the major league records for shutouts. He has hung up 97 already. Before the close of the 1923 season he will have 100 and over to his credit. It will be the first time any major league pitcher has reached the 100 mark in shutouts.

On the day the Washington club announced the signing of Johnson the New York Yankees let the world know that another Johnson had been added to the American League.

The latest Johnson is a pitcher, a student at Bethel College in Kentucky. Last year he pitched for Aberdeen of the Dakota League. He is a right hander.

Billy Evans Says—

In major league circles Kid Gleason of the Chicago White Sox has a great reputation among the players.

"If a player who appears to have the ability fails to make good with some major league club you will immediately hear the remark 'I'll bet Kid Gleason could make a star out of him.'"

As a rule, any player who has no chance to succeed with a certain club, always expresses a preference

Daubert Has Biggest Year Of His Career At Age When Most Players Are Through

JAKE DAUBERT

By Billy Evans

"Who is the best first baseman in the National League?" I asked Umpire Bill Klem of the National League during the world series. It didn't take him very long to answer my question.

"Jake Daubert played the best game of his career in 1922," said Klem. "Old Jake acted like a youngster. He did everything well and had a big year of it. Daubert easily was the most valuable first baseman in the National League last season."

Unquestionably, the play of Jake Daubert for Cincinnati last season was one of the remarkable features of the year in major league ball.

At 37 years of age, when most players are slipping rapidly, Daubert had a great season of it. He figured on going at top speed for three or four more years.

Made Great Record

Daubert played in every inning of the 156 games in which Cincinnati took part. His fielding average of .993 was best in the National League, a fraction of a point in advance of Charley Grimm's mark. He batted .336, making 205 hits, of which 22 were triples—more than three batters than any other National Leaguer made.

Daubert, because he has taken the best of care of himself, sees no reason why a player shouldn't keep on delivering as a big leaguer until he is 40.

"Proper food and sufficient sleep are most essential for every athlete," that he be sent to Chicago if possible.

There is a reason of course. Kid Gleason fairly excudes personality. He makes a pal of every player, makes him believe that he is a great ball player and rarely does he fail in his efforts.

Kid Gleason has a convincing style. He can spread salve as smoothly as any manager in the game, when convinced that salve is needed to get results from a certain player. If, on the other hand, it becomes evident that the player needs cave-man stuff, no one can supply stone-age methods more firmly than Gleason.

The Kid is a convincing character from any angle you view him. He likes the fighter. And by fighter don't get the impression that the Kid likes the player who picks on the umpire. Gleason's idea is to let the umpire alone and confine the fighting to the other team.

Of all things, Gleason admires courage most in a ball player. He will forgive errors, mental or physical, but lack of courage never. Gleason very frankly says that many players who are regarded as yellow are unjustly branded. He insists lack of proper handling often brings about such a reputation. Most ball players are game if you handle them properly, opines the Kid.

Former College Wrestling Coach Gets Championship Bout With Lewis

By NEA Service

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 23.—To leap from the rather humble position as coach of the Colorado Aggies wrestling team to a place as one of the world's heavyweight champions in a few short months, is the record of Joe "Toots" Mondt, who has just been matched to meet Ed "Strangler" Lewis for the world's title in Kansas City in February.

Mondt is a product of Greeley, Colo. He began wrestling while studying in the agricultural college and later became instructor. He did some wrestling on the Pacific Coast last year, but his first bid for fame was made during the present season.

In the first contest Lewis agreed to throw him twice in 75 minutes, but failed to throw him once.

In the second match, a two-hour handicap affair, Lewis won one fall, but failed to win another in the allotted time and there was a dispute and much agitation over the unsatisfactory result of the match, which was in Kansas City in January.

CHECKER STARS IN TOURNAMENT AT JAMESTOWN

Jamestown, N. D., Feb. 23.—Handicapped by the absence of their traditional, but imaginary surroundings of apple barrels, cracker boxes, stale prune and cheese odors, and with regular cupids taking the place of a dilapidated coal scuttle and radiators instead of the rusty and spilt tinned stove, North Dakota's checker stars played in the Jamestown city hall.

Among the entrées, bending in deep concentration over the black and red squares, at the tournament opening, were Anders Bjerkness, of Park River, present state champion, and Ed Meyer, of Ingree, former state champion, E. H. Nichols of Dickinson, president of the North Dakota checker association, A. P. Jones of Hankinson, secretary of the association, J. L. Gardner of Williston, C. M. Washburn of LaMoure, John Southall of Berlin, C. L. Packer of Elliott, H. M. Crocquist of Kensal and M. O. Raud of Jamestown.

H. H. Lepper of Glasgow, Mont. and Dr. R. R. Frazier of Helena, are here to uphold the checker honor of Montana in a contest to be staged at the close of the North Dakota tournament, for the championship of the Northwest. They will take on the leaders in the North Dakota tournament. This contest will most likely be held Saturday and Sunday.

In the tournament now underway, each man plays every other man two games and the four highest scorers qualify for the semifinals and finals.

Adams Will Help Pirates' Chances

By NEA Service

Pittsburg, Feb. 23.—The decision of Babe Adams to postpone his retirement from the majors for another year, means considerable to the chances of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

While Adams no longer has the stamina to work every third or fourth day, he will be able to help out at various times when the rest of the staff is hard pressed. In addition as a rescue twirler, to work an inning or two, he should be able to save many a game.

Aside from his work as an active participant, Adams will be of much assistance to Manager McKechnie in the development of the young pitchers. Adams knows how to pitch and has the knack of imparting his knowledge.

Gleason trotted out to second, and what he said to me and the way he looked, soon convinced me that he was the regular second baseman. I walked into the bench.

"I put you on second," barked Stallings as I returned, "why didn't you stay there?"

"Yeah, and you had Gleason on the bench," I answered. "Why didn't you keep him there?"

Yes sir! Kid Gleason has a most convincing manner.

A letter and forwarding of the situation in the Northwest is being sought by Henry C. Wallace, secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture. He said in a letter to Senator Eastgate which was read into the public journal early this week Mr. Wallace said that many complaints had been made of Federal wheat prices to people of the Northwest. His letter follows:

Washington, Feb. 24, 1912

Mr. Luke Livingston,
Larimore N. Dak
Dear Sir:

Ever since I became Secretary of Agriculture the question of wheat grades has been under consideration. People have come here, especial' from the Northwestern states and complained of the Federal grades. I listened patiently and answered patiently to everything that has been said. The Committee on Agriculture in the House of Representatives also has held a number of hearings.

What I have been trying to do is to get an understanding of the whole situation, so that if any chances were made they would be for the

and wheat growers as well.
Let me take this occasion to

Notwithstanding all of the talk on this matter of wheat grades, I have heard from very few farmers. I am anxious to hear direct from the farmers who grow wheat and sell it. I want their opinions as to the grades. My whole purpose is to try to make sure that the grades established are such as will insure

SPORTS

'DEMONS' WILL FACE BATTLE WITH MANDAN

Hardest Test of Season Expected at Game Here Tonight

The biggest home game of the season will be played in the high school "gym" tonight when the "Demons" meet their ancient rivals from Mandan.

The Mandan team already has a victory on its own floor over the local "quints," but the "Demons" are out to even up the score.

For the last two weeks, Bismarck high's team has been handicapped by the injury of Alfson, star center, but he is back in the game again, and Coach Houser planned to use him.

Coach Houser probably will start Burke and Halloran at forward, Alfson at center, and Seeger and Middaugh at guards.

The Mandan aggregation will line up with Newgard and Burdick at forwards, Love at center and Nelson and Williams as guards.

Saturday night the Bismarck team will play a return game in Dickinson.

There will be a benefit dance at Patterson hall after the Mandan game tonight.

No-Hit Hero Is Given Paltry Raise By Sox

By NEA Service
Chicago, Feb. 23.—Now it is easy to understand why South paw pitcher refused to sign with the Chicago White Sox last season.

Kerr had a salary grievance. In 1919 Kerr kept the world series with Cincinnati from being a farce by his fine pitching. His loyalty, however, was evidently soon forgotten.

He couldn't agree on salary. Kerr played with some intelligible last year. Now that he seeks reinstatement, he stands suspended for a year for so doing.

The case of Pitcher Charley Robertson brings the spotlight back to Kerr.

In the spring of last season Robertson pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Detroit in which not a single Tiger player reached first base. It was one of the greatest pitching feats in the history of the sport.

Robertson became a hero overnight. The fame of that remarkable game made him the gate attraction of the Sox. He was conservatively valued at $15,000 to the Chicago club. Fans all over the circuit wanted to see the youngster.

Robertson has just returned his 1923 contract unsigned. It calls for a $15 a month raise, about $100 for the season. Robertson asks $1000 increase. He deserves it.

Yankees Sign Young Pitcher By Name Johnson

By NEA Service
Washington, Feb. 23.—The American League insists on fortifying itself against the time when Walter Johnson will pass out of the majors.

For years the name of Walter Johnson has been a big attraction in the Johnstown organization. Cobb, Johnson and Ruth have been great turnstile attractions.

Recently the wires carried the story that Johnson had returned his signed contract to the Washington club. Next year will make his seventh season in the American League.

Johnson, by the way, holds the major league records for shutouts. He has hung up 97 already. Before the close of the 1922 season he will have 100 and over to his credit. It will be the first time any major league pitcher has reached the 100 mark in shutouts.

On the day the Washington club announced the signing of Johnson the New York Yankees let the world know that another Johnson had been added to the American League.

The latest Johnson is a pitcher, a student at Bethel College in Kentucky. Last year he pitched for Aberdeen of the Dakota League. He is a right hander.

Billy Evans Says—

In major league circles Kid Gleason of the Chicago White Sox has a great reputation among the players.

If a player who appears to have the ability fails to make good with some major league club you will immediately hear the remark: "I'll bet Kid Gleason could make a star out of him."

As a rule, any player who has no chance to succeed with a certain club always expresses a preference

Daubert Has Biggest Year Of His Career At Age When Most Players Are Through

JAKE DAUBERT

By Billy Evans
"Who is the best first baseman in the National League?" I asked Umpire Bill Klem of the National League during the world series. It didn't take him very long to answer my question.

"Jake Daubert played the best game of his career in 1922," said Klem. "Old Jake acted like a youngster. He did everything well and had a big year of it. Daubert easily was the most valuable first baseman in the National League last season."

Unquestionably, the play of Jake Daubert in Cincinnati last season was one of the remarkable features of the year in major league ball.

At 37 years of age, when most players are slipping rapidly, Daubert had a great season of it. He figures on going at top speed for three or four more years.

Made Great Record
Daubert played in every inning of the 154 games in which Cincinnati took part. His fielding average of .993 was best in the National League, a fraction of a point in advance of Charley Grimm's mark. He batted .336, making 205 hits, of which 22 were triples more than three batters than any other National League made.

Daubert, because he has taken the best of care of himself, sees no reason why a player shouldn't keep on delivering as a big leaguer until he is 40.

"Proper food and sufficient sleep are most essential for every athlete," that is he sent to Chicago if possible.

There is a reason of course. Kid Gleason fairly excudes personality. He makes a belief that every player makes him believe that he is a great ball player and rarely does he fail in his efforts.

Kid Gleason has a convincing style. He can spread, save as smoothly as any manager in the game, when convinced that save is needed to get results from a certain player. If, on the other hand, he becomes convinced that the player needs a change, he will not supply stone-age methods more firmly than Gleason.

The Kid is a convincing character from any angle you view him. He likes the fighter. And by fighter he doesn't get the impression that the Kid likes the player who picks on the umpire. Gleason's idea is to let the umpire alone and confine the fighting to the other team.

Of all things, Gleason admires courage most in a ball player. He will forgive errors, mental or physical, but lack of courage never. Gleason very frankly says that many players who are regarded as yellow are unjustly branded. He insists lack of proper handling often brings about such a reputation. Most ball players are game if you handle them properly, opines the Kid.

Gleason always practiced as a

Former College Wrestling Coach Gets Championship Bout With Lewis

JOE 'TOOTS' MONDT

By NEA Service
Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 23.—To leap from the rather humble position as coach of the Colorado Aggies' wrestling team to a place as one of the most dangerous challengers for the world's heavyweight championship in a few short months, is the record of Joe "Toots" Mondt, who has just been matched to meet Ed "Strangler" Lewis for the world's title in Kansas City in February.

Mondt is a product of Greeley, Colo. He began wrestling while studying in the agricultural college and later became instructor. He did some wrestling on the Pacific Coast last year, but his first bid for fame was made during the present season.

CHECKER STARS IN TOURNAMENT AT JAMESTOWN

Jamestown, N. D., Feb. 23.—Handicapped by the absence of their traditional, but imaginary surroundings of apple barrels, cracker boxes, stale prune and cheese odors, and with regular cuspids taking the place of a dilapidated coat, scuttle and radiator instead of the rusty and spit stained stove, North Dakota's leading checker player opened their ninth annual tournament in the Jamestown city hall.

Among the entrants, bending in deep concentration over the black and red squares of the tournament opening, were Anders Bjerkness of Park River, present state champion, John Meyer of Pingree, former state champion, E. H. Nichols of Dickinson, president of the North Dakota checker association, A. P. Jones of Hankinson, secretary of the association, J. L. Garfield of Williston, C. M. Washburn of LaMoure, John Southall of Berlin, C. L. Packer of Elliott, H. M. Crocquist of Kensal and M. O. Ruud of Jamestown.

H. H. Lepper of Glasgow, Mont. and Dr. R. R. Frazier of Helena, are here to uphold the checker honors of Montana in a contest to be staged at the close of the North Dakota tournament, for the championship of the Northwest. They will take on the leaders in the North Dakota tournament. This contest will most likely be held Saturday and Sunday.

In the tournament now underway, each man plays every other man two games and the four highest scorers qualify for the semi-finals and finals.

Adams Will Help Pirates' Chances

By NEA Service
Pittsburgh, Feb. 23.—The decision of Babe Adams to postpone his retirement from the majors for another year, means considerable to the chances of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

While Adams no longer has the stamina to work every third or fourth day, he will be able to help out at various times when the rest of the staff is hard pressed. In addition as a rescue twirler, to work an inning or two, he should be able to save many a game.

Aside from his work as an active participant, Adams will be of much assistance to Manager McKechnie in the development of the young pitchers. Adams knows how to pitch and has the knack of imparting his knowledge.

Broken-hearted, he tried to kill himself on his loved one's doorstep. Mrs. Hargis returned to her husband.

The debaters were: Adelphi, Gerald Duppier and Theodore Mantel; Ad Althors, Victor Johnson and Leslie Erhardt.

Child, Three Years Old, Is Heroine at Fire

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 23.—Robert, the one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Brunelle, living on a farm between Horace and Wild Rice is alive today, although in critical condition, thanks to the heroism of his three-year-old sister, Cecile.

The little fellow is under the care of a physician at the home of his grandparents in Fargo. Mrs. and Miss Brunelle, 606 Seventh St. N.

Left alone with his sister for a moment by the mother, in a room in which was a tubful of hot water, the baby toppled into the liquid.

Seizing his legs, the little girl pulled him out and then waited to the mother's return to the room, the first notice of the near tragedy.

"Mama, Bobbie's burned! He's going to die," cried the little heroine.

"I got hold of his legs and pulled him right out," she said later.

Mrs. Brunelle said that the fact that the water was not scalding hot undoubtedly saved the baby's life. She said the tub had been standing for some time and that cold water also had been added.

Relatives believe the burns from which the child is suffering may have been caused by the strong soap in the water.

Little Robert's abdomen and chest are badly burned, according to Dr. J. F. Hanna, attending physician.

JURY RECORD FOR SPEED SET

Minot, N. D., Feb. 23.—By returning verdict in three minutes, a jury in district court here believed to have set a new record for Ward county jury action. The speedy return was made in favor of the defendant, G. J. Buschler, sued by J. B. Reed of Minot, who sought a judgment of $75 for the loss of a team of horses. According to the testimony, the animals, which had been hired out to the manager of a threshing rig, ate some poisoned oats while threshing was being done at the Buschler farm and died. Buschler some time later gave Reed a check for $75 but Reed was unable to realize on it and sued to recover.

FARMER HANGS SELF
Leeds, N. D., Feb. 23.—Peter Anderson, 66, pioneer of this section, hanged himself from a rafter of his barn. Careful preparation was indicated by the fact he removed his coat and gloves and left a note to his family, and some checks. National Wheat Growers' Week

February 19 to 24

Proclamation issued by Governor Nestos.

Wheat is a staple product. North Dakota has the BEST wheat in the world. Controlled selling of this wheat means better prices!

Hard spring wheat is an absolute necessity in the making of good flour. This wheat is grown ONLY in the Northwest. The Wheat Growers association controls the big bulk of this wheat and will in a short time have complete control of it! Do you know what that means to YOU?

very member of the association has equal privileges and rights. Each has an equal share in the conduct of the business. Each will get the same average price for his kind and grade of wheat.

allowing "the other fellow" to reap rich profits from the sale of your grain, is the real reason for the present low prices. Sell your own wheat!

Thousands of farmers have seen the light, and will realize rich rewards by acting on their convictions. How about you?

Growling about the grain gamblers will bring you no relief; barking at the moon is a foolish pastime. Get into action while the other fellows sleep!

rousing enthusiasm, a righteous cause, and a reasonable amount of common horse sense, is all that is needed to turn poverty into prosperity!

Only the weak and the faltering need someone to prod them along; send for a membership agreement and join the biggest economic movement in the history of this country!

What co-operative marketing means—orderly sale, no glutted increased bargaining power through controlled, united sale; taking profits which formerly went to grain dealers; bringing the consumer closer to the producer which benefits both.

very day in every way the NORTH DAKOTA WHEAT GROWERS' ASSOCIATION is getting stronger and stronger, because it is an inevitable economic readjustment that is being brought about through necessity.

returns equal to cost of production plus a reasonable profit will be realized by members of the Wheat Growers associations.

Surdy support of loyal members is the association's best asset. Don't be a leaser; be a leader!

Mellon Favors Capper Measure While Wallace Believes in Lenroot Solution

Washington, Feb. 23.—Belief that the Lenroot-Anderson bill as it was passed by the senate "offers a satisfactory basis for a real rural credit system which would promote more stable farm production and more orderly marketing" was expressed today by Sen. Wallace of the agriculture department in a letter to Rep. Anderson, Republican, Minnesota, co-author of the measure. Declaring that he could see no objection to the Capper bill which also received senate approval recently and is pending before a house committee, Mr. Wallace said "to offer it as a rural credit bill or as a substitute for the Lenroot-Anderson bill would give the farmers the best reason for thinking that in reply to their request for bread that they had been offered a stone."

Mr. Wallace's letter was accepted by many members of the house as taking direct issue with a letter recently sent by Sen. Mellon of the Treasury to Rep. McFadden of the house banking committee expressing preference for the Capper bill and declaring provision of the Lenroot-Capper bill "dangerous" and "unworkable."

The Lenroot-Anderson bill as sent from house to senate Mr. Wallace said has received the cordial approval of the president and has been received by the farmers of the country as a well considered effort to meet their credit need.
